Last Jews Push Ashore To Escape Time Bomb

Found on Transport After Landing; Other Refugees Put Up Bitter Battle

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 9 (AP). British troops unloaded the last transport of Exodus 1947 refugees by use of fire hoses, rubber truncheons and clubs today. Jews with bloodied heads were brought up clawing and screeching, taken bodily from the ship and flung into a waiting train.

A British searching party discovered a time bomb aboard the Empire Rival, the second of the transports to be unloaded. They took it ashore, where it exploded with such violence that every window in a 100-yard radius was smashed.

Explosives experts said that if it had gone oc in the ship, it would have torn a six-foot hole in the hull. All the Jews were ashore when the bomb was discovered. That transport was the only one of three from which the Jews had disembarked without giving any trouble.

The British army announced that 17 Jewish men were injured in the melee below deck on the Runnymede Park, the last transport to be unloaded. The worst hurt had a broken wrist and "damaged" skull. Seven women were hurt—one had a broken wrist—and four were hysteria cases.

Three British soldiers were injured. One had a head injury, another a broken wrist.

But tonight, the 55-day he[illegible] of the 4329 refugees was ove[illegible] All three of the transports th[illegible]ad brought them from Pa[illegible]ne, which they had tried to e[illegible] illegally on the blockade [illegible]nner Exodus 1947, had been unloaded. The Ocean Vigour was unloaded of 1406 refugees yesterday. The Empire Rival was emptied without trouble of its 1428 early today. The Runnymede Park, on which there were 1485 Jews, was where the real violence started. The British had said before the Runnymede docked that it had the "tough guys" on board.

Stinging streams of Elbe River water from high pressure hoses failed to bring them out. Finally, 175 British soldiers and military police went on board, fought their way into a hold and subdued the ringleaders with clubs and truncheons.

Thirty or 40, some with blood streaming down their faces and necks, were brough out feet first by soldiers, hustled down the gangplank and thrown on the train.

In the midst of the trouble, 400 Jewish displaced persons from the camp at Belsen tried to storm the

3 Sailors Injured In Explosion At Indian Head

An explosion inside a bombproof building at the Naval Powder Factory at Indian Head, Md., yesterday injured three sailors.

The Navy announced the three injured men, all naval personnel, were taken to Bethesda Naval Hospital suffering from fragmentation wounds.

They were disarming fuses on enemy ordnance, the spokesman said, when the blast occurred. The building, about 20 feet square, is built of reinforced concrete about 18 inches thick and was undamaged.

The injured were listed as:

Do Your Worst, Truman Dares Equator Hazers

Aboard the Missouri, Sept. 9.—In jaunty bravery, President Truman today invited King Neptune to give him the full treatment administered to "pollywogs" when this home-bound battleship crosses the Equator Thursday.

Moreover, said the President, as he twirled a landlubber cane in this most extraordinary setting, "I have arranged for everybody to get his fair share, including Margaret."

Just what the 350 "shellbacks" aboard have in store in the way of hazing and horseplay for the President, Mrs. Truman and their daughter is a secret. But the "shellbacks"—men who have crossed the imaginary line in the past—were hard at work all day on surprises for the first family.

CIO in Campaign

Allentown, Pa., Sept. 9 (AP).—Republican Franklin H. Lichtenwalter forged into an early lead tonight over Democrat Phil H. Storch in their battle for Pennsylvania's Eighth Congressional District seat. Returns from the first 24 of 214 precincts gave Lichtenwalter 5110, Storch 2168.

Ten of the reporting districts were in strongly Republican Bucks County, where Lichtenwalter rolled up a lead of 3825 to 1065. In the first four precincts to report from industrial Lehigh County, Lichtenwalter had 1285, Storch 1103. One of those four, one in Storch's home city of Allentown, gave him 536 votes to 93 for his Republican opponent.

Labor Law Main Issue

The battle for the Congressional seat had been waged during the campaign largely on the issue of Government intervention in labor relations. Observers said the total vote in Lehigh County would probably set an off-year primary record.

Waging their campaigns on the principal issue of the Taft-Hartley labor law were Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, 37-year-old Republican, and Phil H. Storch, 36, the Democratic candidate. The election was a special one held in connection with the primary.

Storch, president of the Lehigh Valley Newspaper Guild, CIO, based his campaign on repeal of the newly enacted labor law. He termed the bill "a vicious piece of legislation against the working man."

Lightenwalter, speaker of Pennsylvania's House of Representatives, answered Storch's assertions by stating the law is bipartisan legislation, passed by majorities of both parties over President Truman's veto.

Lehigh Vote Heavy

The campaign attracted national attention when CIO President Philip Murray and other labor leaders gave indorsement to Storch's candidacy.

The pair sought the congressional seat for Lehigh and Bucks counties, which was vacated by Charles L. Gerlach, Republican.

While early voting was abnormally heavy in Allentown and most of Lehigh County, first reports from Bucks County showed light balloting. Only 10 per cent of Bucks County voting was reported by noon, but officials at Boylestown, county seat, said that in the rural areas most returns are not received until late afternoon.

There are 72,000 Republicans and 46,000 Democrats registered in the two-county area in eastern Pennsylvania.

Elsewhere the vote was light as Pennsylvanias selected municipal candidates for November's general election.

Crop Estimate Today

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's grain markets staged a new riotous advance yesterday on the eve of the publication of the vital September 1 Crop Estimate, due at 3 p. m. today.

Wheat, corn, oats, soybeans and lard went up in some futures categories the limit permitted in one day's trading, or 10 cents for wheat, 8 cents for corn, 6 cents for oats, 8 cents for soybeans and $2 a hundred pounds for lard.

Corn and oats set new all time highs, while wheat set a new record for this time of the year.

All Spells Higher Prices

At East St. Louis and Fort Worth, Tex., stockyards, cattle and hogs sold at new high records, and at other yards the top was about the same at former all-time highs.

Butter and eggs futures followed the trend by reaching new peaks on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. It all spelled higher prices for the harassed housewife.

The performance by grain indicated that traders anti[illegible] a still further drop in grain p[illegible]cts in today's report. Weather reports and private advices from the grain fields indicate a new spell of hot, dry weather throughout the corn belt has increased the already serious injury to corn.

Adding to the seriousness of the corn damage is the report that today's estimate will show that the weather also has cut deeply into this year's spring wheat yield, although the wheat crop, will be far and away the largest ever harvested.

Official Attention Attracted

Indications were pronounced yesterday that the wild gyrations in grain is attracting official attention in several quarters.

Today the Harriman Committee, appointed to determine American resources available for operation of the proposed Marshall Program, will meet at the Department of Commerce.

All day yesterday the subcommittee studying what Amrica can offer Europe in the way of food and agricultural assistance was busy at the Bureau of Agricultural Economics wrestling with its problem, under the chairmanship of Chester C. Davis, president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank.

Davis last year headed the Famine Emergency Committee, appointed by President Truman to conduct the campaign to conserve food in this country for export to famine-threatened world areas.

"The American public," Davis asserted, "isn't aroused to the seriousness of the present situation. The shortage of food in the world is even more critical than it was 18 months ago.

Committee Never Dissolved

Davis said the Famine Emergency Committee was never dissolved. However, he expressed doubt that it could do much else than help arouse the public to the necessity of conserving food if mass hunger is to be averted abroad this winter.

Agriculture Secretary Anderson called three top-flight departmental aides to his home at Albuquerque last weekend to discuss the impending grain shortage.

It was reliably reported yesterday that the rampaging markets were given great attention. Attending were Jesse B. Gilmer, chief of Production and Marketing Administration; his assistant, Ralph S. Trigg, and Nathan Koenig, Anderson's administrative assistant.

Another report at the Depart[illegible]and canned fruits, sugar (of which ment was that substitution of dried there now is an abundance) and some fats and oils in place of wheat for export to hungry lands, was considered at the meeting.

One reason for the recent sensational jump in wheat was disclosed in announcement by Agriculture yesterday that August grain exports were 67,471,000 bushels, or 1,781,000 long tons, of which

Lee, Shaw Resignations Rock Democrats in Montgomery

The Democratic Party of Montgomery County, Md., last night was rocked by two surprise announcements by organization heads.

1. Lacy Shaw, county chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, announced his resignation of the post.

2. E. Brooke Lee, party boss for the past 24 years, gave a farewell speech, announcing he was relinquishing leadership to the younger members.

Both said they would continue to work side by side with the organization but that they were no longer willing to be "out in the front."

A third announcement, which came as no great surprise to the organization was made by Lee. He indorsed the new 1948 proposed charter for county government.

The announcements were made before nearly 100 county Demo-

At Least 22 Others Feared Killed in Pittsburgh Tragedy

Pittsburgh, Sept. 9 (AP).—The toll of known dead reached six tonight in an explosion and fire which destroyed the five-deck excursion steamer Island Queen as firemen prepared to search the twisted wreckage which city officials expecteed to yield at least 22 more bodies.

Seventeen others of the boat's crew of 88 were injured. Twelve more were accounted for, leaving 53 crew members whose whereabouts were unknown. It was not known immediately how many of these 53 were aboard ship when tragedy struck.

Accurate Figures Lacking

Fire Chief William Davis said firemen would search the sunken hull of the once?proud river steamer tonight if they could do so without danger. Portable lights were rigged to aid the search and acetylene torches were brought to the waterfront.

As darkness enveloped the disaster scene in the Monongahela River at the city's Water Street wharf, there was no accurate way to measure the full scope of the tragedy.

City Police Supt. Harvey Scott and firemen estimated the death toll, but admitted the difficulty of fixing of a definite figure until it could be ascertaned how many of the crew were aboard.

Two mighty blasts rocked the boat. Fire wrapped the big steamer from prow to fantail with incredible swiftness.

Hinges on Marshall Plan

Odds Called Favorable to U. S. In French Test of Communism

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Paris (By Airmail).—If the Marshall Plan succeeds, it could mark an historic setback to communism. If it fails, it could have the opposite effect.

That judgment is a concensus of a large number of informed observers here. They see in France a testing ground. They feel that Secretary Marshall's few sentences at Harvard, plus the present grave economic situation, together have drawn a sharp issue here between East and West.

From the American point of view, some factors are favorable for a test to be made at this time:

1. The Communists are not now in the French government. They fear political isolation. Although the largest single party in France, they are still a minority. Though they poll more than five million votes, that total is in no measure their strength. They have, in fact, only 800,000 members; of these only 200,000 are thought to be do-or-die militants. The party risks losing popular support.

2. The Communist Party is opposed by the three other large political parties, united at this time in strong anti-Communist animus.

3. The Marshall Plan—not really a plan, but rather an American offer to aid conditioned on Europe's development of its own plans for sound economic reconstruction—met with an enthusiastic response, widespread among the masses of the people. The suggestion inspired the French.

4. The proposal forced the Communists into a difficult political situation. They were obliged to condemn the idea at the very time when it was popular. They had to argue, and are now arguing.

Brannaman Elected by VFW, Communist Party Ban Urged

Cleveland, Sept. 9 (AP).—Ray H. Brannaman of Denver, Colo., was elected national commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the close of the forty-eighth national encampment today.

Lyall T. Beggs of Madison, Wisc. was elected senior vice commander-in-chief. Both men were selected without opposition and moved up to the two top offices under a seniority system.

Earlier the encampment asked direct Government action "to enjin the existence of the Communist Party of the United States."

It adopted a resolution directing the VFW commander-in-chief to request the President of the United States to instruct the Attorney General "to institute legal action to enjoin the existence of the Communist Party of the United States and enjoin the operation and publication of its instrumentality, a newspaper commonly known and designated as The Daily Worker."

The resolution continued that "in lieu of the requested action being taken by the Attorney General of the United States, the commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is further authorized on behalf of the organization to take appropriate action to carry out the full intent of this resolution."

The latter sentence was amended to "authorize" the "appropriate action," after the wording originally directed the VFW commander to "institute suit."

Barrett Now Asks Public to Be Polite

The "courtesy program" of the police force has backfired, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said yesterday.

The major recently ordered the city's finest to be considerate and courteous in dealing with the public. Now he commends to the public's consideration, a request that they be polite toward policemen.

It seems, Major Barrett said, that courteous cops are beginning to complain of discourteous citizens.

Major Barrett showed that he meant his courtesy order when he dismounted a motorcycle policeman who bawled out a citizen instead of merely giving him a ticket.

"But I want it known," Major Barrett said, "that I will stand behind my men. I will not see my men mistreated simply because they are doing their duty."

He said that among recent complaints he has received from policemen is one in which a citizen served with a ticket promised that he

Two fines totaling $35 and a lengthy lecture weer given Richard E. Jones, 21, yesterday by Municipal Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Attention was called to what would have been just a drunk and disorderly case when Jones' mother complained he had been the victim of police brutality.

Jones, who lives at 3035 M st. nw., was arrested early on the morning of August 31. He resisted arrest, so Pvt. R. B. Lewis of the Seventh Precinct called for reinforcements in the form of two scout car policemen.

In his melee with the policemen, Jones suffered injuries which required treatment at Georgetown Hospital. He was booked on three charges—drunk, disorderly conduct and assault.

Jones' appearance before Judge Quinn followed a conference yesterday morning at which it was decided the assault charge against the youth would not be pressed, and Jones would not prefer charges

Turk Premier Resigns Under Policy Attack

Hasan Saka to Form New Interim Cabinet Till Assembly Meets

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 9 (AP).—Premier Recep Peper resigned today and Foreign Minister Hasan Saka, who recently helped complete the arrangements whereby the United States will spend one hundred million dollars for military aid to Turkey, was instructed to form a new cabinet.

Peker's government fell under the impact of growing criticism against his domestic policies which were held by many of his own Peoples Party to have been autocratic.

A presidential communique said Peker's resignation was "due to conditions of health," but he has been under mounting pressure from his own party as well as that of the growing Democratic Party.

Only three days ago Peker shook up his year-old cabinet in an effort to combat dissatisfaction, and today's announcement came as a surprise.

Hasan Saka's government will be an interim cabinet to serve until the national assembly reconvenes in November. The assembly adjourned last Friday after being informed in a presidential message that Peker had replaced four ministers.

Hasan Saka is considered an expert on financial matters, having been also finance minister.

Many observers felt he might be replaced by Ali Fuad Jebesoy, one of the moderates of the ruling Peoples Party, after an interval.

Mountainside, N. J., Sept. 9 (U.P.).—A tank truck loaded with 5000 gallons of gasoline crashed and caught fire on a hilly highway near here today, showering flaming gasoline that turned trees and houses by the roadside into roaring torches.

Some 20 to 25 persons were forced to flee from a blazing stream of gasoline and the driver of the truck, James J. Miller, 29, of Scranton, Pa., was hospitalized with critical burns about the legs and body.

The highway was closed to traffic for 4 to 5 hours and officials estimated the damage at more than $30,000.

Britain Seeks To Reduce Her Share of German Cost

October Talks Set; Reports Indicate She Will Ask U. S. To Pay 85 Pct.

U. S. Feeds Greek Forces

GREEK military and naval forces now are being fed altogether by American Army rations, at a cost of about $102,000 a day. Story on Page 2.

Present Plan Is 50-50

The United States agreed last night to listen to pleas from hard-up Britain that this country pay more of the bill for feeding and rehabilitating Germany.

A year ago the wartime partners agreed to operate their two occupation zones as an economic unit and split the costs 50-50.

Diplomatic officials now indicate the British want to cut their share down to around 15 per cent, leaving 85 per cent to the United States.

In any event, the War Department, which is in charge of the occupation, announced that the two countries will talk things over in a conference early next month. The Senate Appropriations Committee will get some advanced details at a special meeting September 20.

Agreement Provides Review

The United States already has given Britain a hand with her economic difficulties by easing terms of a $3,750,000,000 loan, now nearing the point of depletion. But the British remain hard pressed financially, particularly for dollars to buy imports she needs to get back on her feet.

And German occupation costs have been draining away some of her dollars at a rapid rate.

Last year's agreement provided for an annual review if either country desired one. The British did. They said so in a letter sent to Undersecretary of State Lovett on August 23 by John Balfour, then charge d'affaires here in the Ambassador Lord Inverchapel.

The letter explained it would be difficult for Britain to provide dollars for expenditures on Germany when present funds are exhausted at the end of December or early January. The British have to buy much of the food and other supplies for Germany in areas where they have to pay in dollars.

No Specific Request

At present, Britain is spending at a rate of $380,000,000 a year on Germany. Of that, 72 per cent, or $273,000,000 is in dollars, the rest in pounds sterling.

Balfour's letter did not say specifically what percentage of the British costs the United States will be asked to assume. From all official information available, however, it is apparent the least the British want is for th eUnited States to take over all the dollar expenditures or 72 per cent of the British outlay.

Like the British, American expenditures also are running at around $400,000,000 a year. To meet them, and occupation costs in Japan and Korea, the War Department obtained from Congress last session an appropriation of $600,000,000.

Apparently the only way that United States spending in Germany now could be increased to ease the British burden would be to use the $600,000,000 faster than Congress expected.

Indications were that it was to consider this possibility that the State and War Departments de-

Marshall Leaves Friday to Head U. S. Group in U. N.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall will leave here Friday for New York to head personally the United States delegation at the United Nations General Assembly which opens next Tuesday.

Marshall's decision to spend a good part of the next two months personally leading the American delegation was announced by State Department spokesman Lincoln White.

It reflected the importance Marshall attaches to the forthcoming U. N. meeting, at which the United States will raise the entire Greek question, obstructed by a Soviet veto in the Security Council.

U. S. Now Feeding Greek Army, Navy

British Relieved of $102,000 Daily Bill; Sophoulis Calls Parliament for Test Vote

Athens, Sept. 9 (AP).—Dwight P. Griswold, head of the American aid mission in Greece, said today the 196,000 men in Greece's army, navy, air force and gendarmerie were now being fed entirely by American Army rations, at a cost of about $102,000 a day.

The responsibility for feeding the Greek armed forces was taken over from the British September 1, he said. The ration provides each soldier with 3700 calories daily.

The Greek Parliament, meanwhile, was summoned for a vote of confidence on the newly formed Liberal-Populist government of Premier Themistocles Sophoulis.

Sophoulis told a news conference he expected that at least 50 per cent of the Leftist guerillas fighting government forces would surrender under the terms of his proposal of an unconditional amnesty, but he added that no deadline had been set as yet. He said guerillas who feared reprisals would be moved to new communities and given jobs.

[The United Press reported that Minister of War George Stratos had ordered army officers throughout Greece to postpone indefinitely all death sentences for guerillas.]

cided to inform congressional appropriation committees.

The War Department announcement last night said:

"Arrangements have been made for Anglo-American discussion earlyy in October on the financial provisions of the bizonal economic fusion agrement of December 2, 1946.

"The discussions will take place in accordance with the provisions of this agreemeent which provides for review at yearly interval.

"The British government has requested this review owing to their great difficulty and continuing present dollar expenditure for the support of the economy of the combined United States-United Kingdom zone.

"In view of these forthcoming discussions, it was thought appropriate to inform members of the Senate Appropriations Committee of the proposed talks with the British. The discussions with the British will be held in Washington jointly by State and War Departments in consultation with the Treasury Department and other interested government agencies."

Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) sent out the call to the Appropriations Committee as these other developments underscored the economic plight of all of Europe.

1. Government experts said in a secret report that Europe can climb back to her feet only by cooperation from within, help from without and production beyond prewar levels. That outside help means assistance chiefly from the United States.

2. The World Bank rule out any possibility that it might step in with aid before this country can offer a helping hand. Robert Garner, vice president of the $9,100,000,000 institution, told a news conference the bank's policy makes it impossible to lend money for food and goods needed in Europe in the months before the Marshall Plan takes hold.

Secretary of State Marshall's idea is that European countries should figure out what they can do to help themselves. Beyond that, he said, American will help out where it can.

Sixteen nations, meeting now in Paris, have determined that for food or the means to produce it they will require $21,900,000,000 from the United States in the next four years for expenditure abroad. That is aside from all other needs.

Congress must approve any assistance under the Marshall Plan. There has been widespread talk of a special session.

Any funds for aid to Europe, as well as for occupation costs, flow through Bridges' committee. The appropriations chairman did not mention the Marshall Plan or any stop gap measures in a letter asking members to return September 20.

But he said that "in the near future certain urgent and vital questions will arise concerning our governmental and financial policies in occupied areas, particularly in Europe."

Bridges said Secretary of War Royall thought a discussion would be "helpful" both to the committee and the War Department. The Department helps supply food and keeps order in occupied zones.

It was to size up the whole European economic problem, rather than to offer specific solutions, that top Government research men drew up the secret report. It is based on information collected by Government agencies for use in connection with the Paris conference.

The survey shows that in exports and imports, which afford some measure of degree of postwar recovery, western Europe i general has moved closer to prewar volume than the eastern section comprising Russia and seven satellite nations. But as an individual nation, Russia is well up among the leaders in approaching 1938 levels.

Lee prefaced his own intentions to give up the organization leadership with the plunt phrasing:

"The days of Let-Brooke-Do-It are over."

He said he wished to devote more of his time to "occupation and programs for the benefit of myself, my children and my grandchildren."

He said he would retain his position as commissioner and vice chairman of the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission for the months immediately ahead, avowing that he would retire from both positions as soon as he had cleared up planning work still to be done.

"I feel obligated to continue my primary responsibilities on the commission until completion of the park system in the eveloped portions o fthe suburban county and improvement of many new and old park sites and playing fields are accomplished," he said.

The popular party boss said he had "urged" County Commissioner Richard F. Green, of Kensington, Md., to "take over" the NCPPC position, but that GrGeen had consistently refused.

Green, present at last night's meeting, merly smiled at the public disclosure, but gave no indication he would reconsider the reported past refusals.

In coming out for the proposed charter, Lee declared:

"The new charter is totally different from the one presented to the voters in 1944 and is undoubtedly the best charter from the standpoint of sound and time-proven practices of American local government that will ever be written by the group who constitute the leadership of the charter movement."

U. S. Hand in Greece Is Seen Staying Feud of Generation

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, Greece, Sept. 9.—Whether it was application of the Truman doctrine or whether it was the Marshall interpretation of the doctrine, the policy of the American Government in Greece is getting very good results.

With the swearing in of the new Sophoulis-Tsaldaris coalition government, a feud between the two historical Greek parties that has continued for a generation was believed to be at an end.

All over Greece today there was support for the new government and a seeming belief that this country is headed for better days.

Critics on Strange Ground

There are those in America who criticize our policy in Greece. But it is significant that most of the critics never spent much time in Greece, nor are they thoroughly familiar with Greek politics and Greek politicians.

From my vantage point, I feel that the United States has made a sensational contribution to Greek welfare and has made a deep impression on the world that American democracy only hopes to bring about unity, good government, and the economic and political welfare of any country.

For the benefit of the critics, let me say that it would have been very easy to have made a number of critical mistakes in the crisis that has faced Greece in the last month. It would have been easy to land a division of troops in Greece and to have impressed this country that, like Britain, we were depending upon military strength.

It would have been very easy to have lined up with the Royalists and the extreme right-wingers and to have discounted the protests of the Republican elements in the population who bitterly resented the so-called "dynamic" policy of Gen. Napoleon Zervas, whose favorite device was to send political opponents to concentration camps.

None of these things were done.

Assured by Henderson

When United States Administrator Dwight P. Griswold indicated that he was impatient with delay in getting rehabilitation under way, and when Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh demonstrated that he is an old-school diplomat, the State Department sent Loy Henderson, chief of the Near East Division of the State Department, to Greece. Henderson went to Macedonia and looked over the situation there. He came back and talked to leaders of both parties. He lunched with the King.

And he convinced all concerned that the United States was interested only in Greek unity and an end to internal strife.

In the new cabinet, there will be 22 seats plus two undersecretaries. The Populist Party will hold 13 seats, and the Liberal Party of Sophoulis has 11 seats. For thetime being, the Populist George Stratos will remain as minister of war. The Liberal Constantine Rentis will be public safety minister, replacing the spectacular Zervas. Christian Ladas, another Liberal, will be minister of justice.

These are all-important appointments, and they mean a great deal in Greece from the standpoint of the little man who is wondering whether he is going to be arrested tomorrow and sent to a concentration camp.

A political amnesty for all rebels will probably be granted, valid for 30 days, during which time guerillas can come down from the mountains. If this amnesty proclamation is essential, it will undoubtedly be followed by new general elections, held to insure equality of the rights of all.

Full Confidence Expected

Apparently the entire Parliament will vote confidence in the new government, and then, after passing the amnesty law, it will probably be suggested that the chamber adjourn until October 31.

The forthcoming proclamation of the government-in-the-mountains by General Markos Vafthiades an the Communists has had most of the wind taken out of its sails.

R. E. Gilmor Appointed To Greek Aid Mission

The State Department announced yesterday that Reginald E. Gilmor, an official and former preesident of the Sperry Gyroscope Co. has been named chief of the industry division of the American aid misison for Greece.

He left New York yesterday for Athens. A native of Menominee, Wis., Gilmor is a resident of Glen Cove, L. I.

"Yard" Welcomes Flier

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—Reginald Gilbert, 24-year-old United States Army Air Forces veteran, was welcomed heartily at Scotland Yard today as the man who did not bomb London.

Gruff inspectors slapped him on the shoulder and called him a "good boy." One gave him a long cigar.

Later British journalists escorted him to a pub.

Gilbert was brought to London by the RAF to forestall reprisals which might have been made against him in Paris.

dock gates and get onto the Quay. German police and British military police held them off and they gave up in about 30 minutes.

Only 36 had come off the Runnymede Park when the trouble started. They were all sick, six were on stretchers, but the others were able to work. The others on board started singing the Jewish anthem, "Hatikvah."

No more came off. Troops rolled out the fire hoses. Two British officers went on board to plead with the Jews to come off peaceably.

The British gave the Jews an hour to come off. When the hour was up they gave them 30 minutes more. Still none left. Then the hoses were tnurned on.

British troops already on board put on their crash helmets. Other units rushed up the gangplank. The Jews pulled away one companionway into the hold where resistance centered.

Correspondents saw none of the beating. It went on out of sight in the hold. But soon th esoldiers started to come out with the rebellius Jews, handling them like a fire brigade.

Judge Wants Bombs as Proof

By David Perlman

Paris, Sept. 9 (NYHT).—Examining Magistrate Ferdinand Gollety, investigating the alleged Sternist bomb plot on London, said tonight he would withhold charges of carrying explosives against Rabbi Baruch Korff and eight suspected accomplices until police can produce the mysterious weapons.

The judge preferred formal charges of "illegally possessing foreign-inspired tracts prejudicial to the national interest," and sent the seven men and two women to prison pending further hearings.

Gollety said the plans for aerial bombs found in Rabbi Korff's apartment at the Hotel Crillon were not sufficient evidence to support charges of "planning to bomb London" or "possession of war weapons."

Meanwhile, a police spokesman announced that the six fire extinguisher casings and the charges of gelignite—which police insist were to have been fabricated into bombs and dropped on London's Foreign Office—were spirited off in a taxi while detectives were watching the house where they had been located.

T tenth suspect, identified as Camille Schleyer, owner of the print shop where 10,000 anti-British leaflets were printed for showering on London, was arrested tonight and interrogated by police.

As Korff was led down the long corridor in the Palace of Justice, with guards on either side, he shouted: "Tell America they are making another Christ out of me."

He accused Reginald G. M. Gilbert, the American pilot who tipped off police on the plot, with beeing a "British agent who infiltrated." He also charged the young flyer with stealing "at least $1000" from his hotel room. Asked what he thought of Gilbert, he countered with the query, "What do you think of Laval?"

Snyder Discusses Loan to Britain

London, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—United States Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder spent most of today with Amassador Lewis Douglas discussing British proposals for an emergency loan which will be presented formally to him tomorrow.

Snyder gave the rest of his time to conferences with the American delegation to the second annual meeting of the International Bank and World Monetary Fund which opens here Thursday.

The British Cabinet, at a meeting which lasted 3½ hours, approved three suggestions for immediate dollar aid to tide over the nation until the Marshall Plan takes effect, reliable sources said. These were:

1. Thawing of the last 400 million dollars of the American loan.
2. A loan from the American Export-Import Bank, whose president, William Martin, is here.
3. A loan from either the International Bank or Monetary Fund.

Snyder will see Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton tomorrow, and probably will see Prime Minister Attlee and other cabinet ministers.

Besides dollars talks other items on Today's cabinet agenda were: A final review of proposals for increasing Britain's exports, which will be announced Friday by Sir Stafford Crips, president of the board of trade, and measures to end the crippling Yorkshire coal strike.

Crisis Depate Fizzles

London, Sept. 9.—Peers crowded the House of Lords today for a special crisis depate, but Government leaders in the House refused to talk, and the session fizzled out into a one-sided attack against the Labor gevornment's policy, or lack of oit, in dealing with the economic emergency.

Tory and Liberal lords who had broken their holiday to attend the one-day special session received a jolt when Government Spokesman Viscount Hall, in the opening speech, blandly told them the government had nothing to say to their lordships. He said: "It would certainly not be constitutional for the government to regard a meeting of this House alone, in the middle of the parliamentary recess, as a meeting of Parliament for making an important announcement of government policy."

It was moved that the Lords meet in judicial sitting October 14, and for public business on October 20.

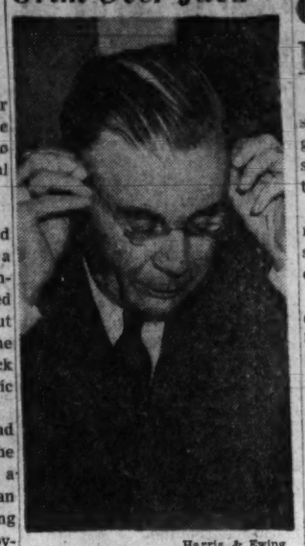
Dutch Leader Grim Over Java



Harris & Ewing

HUBERTUS VAN MOOK, Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, expressed little hope at a press conference yesterday for a United Nations settlement of the hostilities in Indonesia. Van Mook, in Washington to discuss the situation in Java with State Secretary Marshall, said, however, the U. N. may "do a lot of good by establishing the facts"

Soviet Ignores Capital Ships In Police Plan

Lake Success, Sept. 9 (AP).—Russia's long-awaited pattern for a global police force without battleships or carriers was made public today by the United Nations.

The Soviet plan called for a maximum force of 12 troop divisions, 1200 planes and five or six cruisers.

It ignored any need for the capital ship contingents advocated by the United States, Britain, France and China in their original estimates.

There was no explanation of the omission of battleships and carriers in the statement from the Russian delegation to the U. N.'s Big Five military staff committee.

Informed sources speculated, however, that the Russians neglected to propose capital ships because they have insisted on equal contributions from the powers and because Russia has only four old battlewagons and no carriers.

The United States, France, Britain and China submitted their estimates last June in aswer to a Security Council request. Russia said then the action was useless, but later complied. The question of the police force now is stalled in the Council, which still has the military staff committee's first report before it.

The United States turned in the largest estimate, suggesting 20 divisions, 3800 planes, 3 battleships, 6 carriers, 15 cruisters.

In the detailed breakdown of figures—besides the 12 divisions—Russia suggested 600 bombers, 300 fighters, 300 other planes, 5 or 6 cruisters, 24 destroyers, 24 minesweepers, 12 submarines, 24 escort vessels.

Meanwhile the Security Council was recessed until tomorrow as delegates sought in private huddles to find a solution to the Anglo-Egyptian impasses. Egype has called for the British to take their troops out of Egype and for the termination of the administration over the Sudan, but the Council has not yet agreed on a way out of the dispute.

U. N. Activities Summary

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Following is a summary of activities of the United Nations:

1. TROOPS—Russia's first preliminary estimate of the projected world police force suggested nations earmark a total of 12 divisions, 1200 planes and 89 or 90 warships for Security Council action in keeping the peace.

2. DISARMAMENT — Working Committee of Commission for Conventional Armaments, by 7 votes to 2 (Russia and Poland), with two abstentions (Brazil and China) approved American-Australian resolution on its jurisdiction.

3. ASSEMBLY—Russia attacked the inclusion of the Balkan problem on the agenda of the coming General Assembly.

4. BALKANS — Mutual name-calling among the great powers enlivened on-the-spot investigation of a Bulgarian-Greek frontier incident by subsidiary group of Security Council Balkan Commission.

5. EGYPT—The Security Council will meet tomorrow to resume discussion of Egypt's demand that Britain clear out of the Nile Valley.

6. PALESTINE—The American Council for Judaism headed by Lessing J. Rosenwald, applauded U. N. Special Committee on Palestine for its recommendation that 150,000 Jews be allowed to enter Palestine during the next two years.

7. COLONIES — United States submitted plan for standarizing information to be given to U. N. by countries administering nonself-governing territories.

8. FOOD—Eighteen-nation council that will keep constant check on world food situation began to take shape at meeting of Food and Agriculture Organization in Geneva.

50,000 Miners in Yorkshire Now Out; Eden Joins Warning

London, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Five thousand more Yorkshire miners quit work today, increasing the number of strikers to more than 50,000 and closing 48 mines, despite warnings of union leaders that a prolonged strike may result in collapse of the labor government.

The figure 50,000 represented one-third of all Yorkshire miners. Anthony Eden, former foreign minister, joined the growing ranks of public leaders who predicted the crippling walkouts will cause another coal crisis this winter.

Eden, speaking at Liverpool, said the strike had injured "our national prospects for this winter. However hardly the miners may feel they have been dealt with by the national coal board in some instances, there is due at this time a greater loyalty—loyalty to nation."

Officials estimated that 400,000 tons of coal, on which recovery of Britain and Europe depends, have been lost in the strike which began 2½ weeks ago.

Coal deliveries to London were reduced to keep vital industries running in Sheffield, where gas supplies to 3000 plant industries and 100,000 domestic users already have been cut 50 per cent.

Fifty steel furnaces in the Sheffield area have been banked and coal stockpiles of hundreds of other industries were dangerously small.

Fuel Minister Emmanuel Shinwell reported on the strike at today's cabinet meeting and suggested the handling of it be left to the National Miners Union, which has condemned the walkout, political sources said.

Odds Called Favorable to U. S. In French Test of Communism

that the United States is a menace to France, that it is Enemy No. 1. Yet it is almost impossible to make the French people believe this notion. Their instinct and experience tell them it is not so.

Communist Trump

The Communists, however, have one big trump card. The numerous economic and financial problems are difficult to solve. If western Europe fails to draw up a workable plan of reconstruction, and if the United States fails to implement it by monetary nad material help in large enough measure, France and all Europe face a black depression. The high hopes will be crushed; disappointment will take their place. In such an atmosphere, the Communist Party would have a happy hunting ground.

The place where the Communist battle for power will be lost or won is in the trade unions, here as almost everywhere else. The unions, organized in the Confederation Generale du Travaille, are directed and officered in every key spot by party members. Accordingly, the Communist power is great.

But things are not running all their way. The political situation is on a balance, which is why the present issue raised by the Marshall proposal is so important and potentially decisive, either way.

Opposition Develops

Within the trade union movement, the Communists are encountering growing opposition. One union, the postal workers, has already pulled out of the CGT. The railroad workers tried to sever connections, but were not quite strong enough. And generally, there is opposition on a broad basis. It comes partly from a handful of Trotskyites, syndicalists and "anarchists," but mostly (and most important) from socialists and what we would call "pure" trade unionists.

Many anti-Communists here, French and foreign, believe that all support should be given these latter two groups. The effective Communist opposition, they hold, comes from the left, not from the right.

But some observers fear that the United States, the one nation whose support in such a fight really counts, will not give the Socialist and "pure" trade union groups the backing they need. They feel that Americans are too prone to tie up the entire left, Communists as well as anti-Communists, in the same package.

They add that if the American Congress and Government officials are unable to differentiate between a Socialist and a Communist and damn both their houses indiscriminately, there will be small chance of dislodging the boys who take their orders from Russia.

As one expert on the subject puts it: "Nationalization of industry isn't so important; it's who does the nationalizing."

If the Socialists and trade unionists do it, according to this argument, their position and power will be strengthened, even against the Communists. But if their program has majority support and is nevertheless blocked by active American opposition, the result could be to force the disappointed workers into the eager arms of the Communists.

The Communist Party here is operating with all the precision which one might expect from its competent top leadership, all but a handful trained in Moscow.

They are wooing the peasants, with whom voting control rests, by beguiling blue sky promises. They are seeking to retain their hold on the workers by offering a positive program. In union meetings they use precisely those same tactics of working harder, staying later, talking smarter, and politicking shrewder with which some CIO unions in America are only too familiar.

There is here, according to people who have watched closely, all the evidence of the beginnings of police state organization—the accumulation of dossiers, block organizations, militia group formation, instant response to Party Line tip-offs in Pravda.

A few months ago, for example, there was a 12-hour strike of Paris police. Within a couple of hours after it began, young men in civilian clothes, without any distinguishing insigna, appeared at the busy intersections and took over the job of directing traffic. They were completely efficient. Within a few days it was discovered that the volunteer police had been Communists. And, indeed, the Communist press later boasted of the job which the party members undertook.

Similar Communist cadres for the public utilities and other civil functions are alleged to exist.

One of abundant instances of party discipline relates to a story which appeared in the Communist newspaper L'Humanite concerning the execution of a French collaborationist. As he was shot by a firing squad, a picture of a child fell from the breast pocket of his jacket. This sympathetic note was included in the account in L'Humanite. The editor responsible for this oversight was sacked on the spot.

The Achilles heel of the Communists appears to be that the French workers increasingly are coming to recognize them as Moscow stooges. The Russian foreign policy forces the party in France to adopt policies, pass resolutions, call purely political strikes, etc., which are contrary to the interest of the trade union members.

More and more, the requirements of Russian policy force the Communists here to emerge in their true character. The position which the Marshall proposal compelled them to take may be the clincher, the blow that unmasks them beyond doubt.

But it will result in diminishing their power and their grip on the French workers only if the proposal ends in a successful economic program. If the proposal fails, the political results, no less than the economic results, are impossible to predict.

Vishinsky Sees Attack Hint in Western Pact

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, commenting on the new Western Hemisphere pole-to-pole defense pact today, said that very often "when one speaks of defending one's self, one is preparing to attack."

Vishinsky, en route to New York for the U. N. General Assembly meeting September 16, was asked at a news conference to comment on the Inter-American Conference. He made this unelaborated statement:

"The question is organically bound up with the whole scope of policy pursued by the American countries led by the United States.

"When one speaks of defending one's self, it would be interesting to know against whom one is to defend one's self. It is not stated clearly.

"Very often it happens that when one speaks of defending one's self one is preparing to attack. That is the way of a proverb."

The deputy foreign minister refused to comment on several other questions, including formation of a new Greek government.

"There still is no plan yet," he answered when asked for comment on the Marshall Plan to aid Europe.

Concerning the British-American level of Germany industry plan, he said "The question of Germany's industry is one which concerns Germany as a whole" and therefore is a four-power matter.

Now It's 'Men's Auxiliary'

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Queens Post 1315 of the American Legion will install an auxiliary September 30—the "Men's Auxiliary of Post 1515." The post's members are all women veterans of World War II.

Reds Again Deny Plea for Petkov

London, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Russia, in a new note again has rejected the Anglo-American request for a three-power review of the death sentence imposed on Nikola Petkov, Bulgarian opposition leader, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

Both the United States and Britain boycotted today's celebration in Sofia o fthe third anniversary of the coup which led to Bulgaria's surrender, as a gesture against the sentencing of Petkov.

In the new Russian note, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei I. Vishinsky again accused Britain and the United States of interfering in Bulgarian internal affairs.

Nehru to Stamp Out 'War' With Troops

New Delhi, Sept. 9 (AP).—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru declared in a radio address tonight that the government of the Dominion of India was confronted with a situation "analogous to war" and that it would meet the "serious crisis . . . on a war basis."

Nehru asserted that the military "still are masters of the situation" and soon would be "more the masters" in dealing with the crisis he described as threatening the future of the nation.

He did not specify what military measures would be taken to end the communal fighting, looting, arson and carnage that have laid waste great areas of the partitioned Punjab and, in the last few days, paralyzed his own capital.

Moslems Flee Delhi Area

Thousands of Moslems, fearing death at the hands of inflamed Sikhs and Hindus, fled today from the twin cities of Old and New Delhi, where an estimated 1000 have lost their lives in brutal massacres in the last three days and where gunfire still was heard by night and day.

The 1000 estimate was from official sources, but one civil official said the total dead and wounded might reach 10,000.

Police and military authorities said that som slackening occurred in the rioting late today but the situation remained tense as fires continued to blaze and rifles cracked.

Normal life in both cities remained paralyzed. Rail and air transportation was halted and communications were not restored.

Mohandas K. Gandhi, the wizened father of Indian independence, arrived from Calcutta where his 73-hour protest fast last week was ended after a halt in the communal slaughter. He conferred with Governor General Lord Mountbatten on the situation.

Refugees Inflame Hatred

Approximately 300,000 Moslems reside in Old and New Delhi—the latter the capital of the Hindu Dominion of India. They feel themselves caught in a death trap in the area, where hatred against the Moslems has grown with an influx of thousands of Sikh and [illegible] refugees from the Punjab.

Pakistan is 300 miles away for the Moslems, but by the thousands they were quitting the Delhi area.

Indian Christians were wearing big red cloth crosses sewn to the front of their bosoms so that they would not be mistaken for Moslems.

Bodies of those slain today and yesterday still were lying in the streets. Newsmen touring the city saw the police and soldiers besieging snipers who fired from houses or tossed bombs from rooftops.

The India cabinet decided to set up a committee to coordinate all military police and volunteer efforts in one headquarters. Hundreds have volunteered for police and magisterial duty.

Chiang Quoted as Saying Rule A Failure, Corruption Rife

Nanking, China, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told the Koumintang central executive committee today that his 20-year leadership had been a "failure," a high Koumintang source said.

In a bitter, 40-minute speech, Chiang berated Koumintang leaders for "low morale and corruption" within the party. He said the current economic and political situations were the "gravest in Koumintang history," the source said.

Chiang was quoted as saying that after 20 years of his leadership he saw only "chaos all around me." Then he added, "I have failed Sun Yat-sen (founder of the Chinese Republic)."

Chiang reminded the committee that its greatest enemies were the Communists. He urged the members not to underestimate Communist strength.

Political observers believed the speech was a result of the recent statement by Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer after his mission completed its investigation of conditions in China for President Truman.

On the fighting front, government forces captured Pingtu and four other towns in a concerted drive to clear the Communists from Shantung Peninsula, a National Defense Ministry spokesman said.

Progovernment newspapers, while playing up reported victories on Shantung, conceded that the much-heralded government offensive in north central China which started a month ago has petered out.

Accountants to Meet

The Washington Chapter of the National Association of Cost Accountants will hold a board meeting in the Blackstone Hotel at 7:30 tonight.

VFW Elects Denver Man

when the success is selected for Gen. Omar Bradley as head of the Veterans' Administration, a civilian "with no entangling alliances be named.

The delegates approved another resolution asking Congress to create a division of Americanism in the State Department, for the purpose of "conducting a national coordinated program to indoctrinate the American people in the Nation's history, traditions and ideals," and to "expose the propaganda of subversive groups with the light of truth."

DP Admission Opposed

[The United Press said the VFW overwhelmingly approved a resolution against allowing immigration into the United States of refugees and displaced persons from Europe.

The 'acute housing shortage and danger of unemployment" were reasons cited for the opposition. The action by the veterans today bore out their disapproval of the Stratton bill permitting 400,000 DP's to enter this country, which they opposed last year in Congress.—Editor's Note.]

Brannaman, 55, succeeds Louis E. Starr of Portland, Oreg. The new commander in chief is a rancher and former chairman of the Colorado Industrial Commission.

Clyde A. Lewis, a Plattsburg (N. Y.) attorney, became first World War II veteran to become eligible under the VFW's seniority system for the post of national commander in chief when he was unanimously elected junior vice commander in chief.

Other Officers Named

Other officers named before the encampment closed were R. B. Hanby, jr., Kansas City, Mo., quartermaster general; Hudson Hyatt of Cleveland, judge advocate general; Canon Meritt F. Williamson of the Washington Cathedral, national chaplain, and Dr. William R. Morrisson of Belmont, Mass., surgeon in chief of Boston City Hospital, elected surgeon-general.

Mrs. Dorothy Mann of Detroit was elected national president of the Women's Auxiliary. She succeeded Mrs. Sally Cannon of Washington.

Other national officers named by the auxiliary included Mrs. Helen M. Murphy, Union, N. J., senior vice president; Mrs. Evelyn Monaco, Gallup, N. Mex., junior vice president; Mrs. Grace H. Davis, Kansas City, Mo., secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Sue Ilg, Edgewood, R. I., chaplain.

Visitors Barred At White House When Pipe Bursts

Electric current and visitors were turned off the third floor of the White House yesterday when a olng-used hot-water pipe burst. Electrical connections were flooded temporarily and visitors were barred from public rooms for the rest of the day.

White House officials said no damage was done to newly-pinted walls or freshly-cleaned furniture and decorations, work on which ws completed last month.

Workmen are completing curbings and resurfacing on the curving drive that goes from the gates to the portico on the Pennsylvnia side.

Montgomery Adds Eight Policemen

Appointment of eigh new policemen to the Montgomery County police force was announced yesterday by County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr.

The new men, whose appointments are effective next Monday, are: Leonard E. Seese, Rockville; Albert D. Harris, jr., Glen Echo Heights; George J. Bodmer, Beallsville; Steve P. Hall, Silver Spring; Thomas E. Hutchins, Bethesda; William T. DeNeil, Bethesda; Paul Olando Sheckles, Rockville, and William W. Hitchins, Brookmont.

In addition, McNayr said, a position of corporal in charge of school safety programs has been created, with Pve. Charles O. Seek, of the Bethesda substation, filling the post. His promition is effective today.

New Volcano Appears In Southwestern Peru

Nasca, Peru, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—The Andes Mountains of southwestern birth of a new volcano in the Peru today threw the inhabitants of the Puquio area into a panic, causing them to flee their homes.

San Felipe Hill began to erupt smoke and lava although it had never before shown any signs of volcanic activity. Fissures opening in the surrounding ground recently were the only prelude to the eruption.

VA Threatens to Discipline Builders of Shoddy GI Homes

The Veterans' Administration yesterday threatened to discipline builders, lenders and appraisers because of what is called shoddily built homes financed with GI loans.

In addition: (1) The CIO declared it is time for the Federal government to set up an aid program for mass production of homes.

(2) A 14-man Senate-House committee to investigate the nation's housing situation announced that public hearings will begin here today, with additional sessions to be held later in major cities.

The veterans agency said that veterans complain daily about "serious defects" in construction. It told builders, lenders and appraisers that it expects conditions to be corrected "wherever they may arise."

Furthermore, VA announced, where the fault is definitely determined, it will take "disciplinary measures," which might mean removing appraisers from the approved list, suspending lenders from the program, or, if the offender is a builder, requiring a lower valuation on future building "in anticipation of poor workmanship."

The VA said that investigation showed that "structures have been erected without regard to the plans . . . with poor workmanship or shoddy material."

"As a result," they said, "within a few months after the purchase of his home, the veteran is faced with inordinate repair costs and in many instances weaknesses in construction which are impossible to correct."

Exaggeration Charged

The National Association of Home Builders promptly replied that VA was "exaggerating." It said it was "perfectly true" that some irresponsible builders were turning out jerry-built homes, but that the "bad stuff is in a minority."

The association said that on the whole, the "average veteran buying a home is getting a square deal; many builders are doing a better job now than they did before the war."

A spokesman said that VA had failed to accept repeated offers by the association to check all complaints with a view toward adjusting them. He added that the agency did supply five—two of them "well-founded" and the others "in between"—but then refused to turn over any further complaints with the explanation that they were too numerous.

The CIO contended that private enterprise is building only half the housing units "the Nation ought to have" and called for a "public enterprise" program.

The CIO said in its monthly publication, The Economic Outlook, that the Government must step in with loans and plans to spur housing construction.

"The need for housing is grave," the CIO said. "The remedy is obvious. If private enterprise won't do it, public enterprise must.

"During the war when housing was vital, the Government did not hesitate to build. It condemned land, appropriated materials and recruited labor.

"We did it once before, and it's time to do it again."

New Wage Spiral Feared by AFL

High Prices Seen Forcing Increases; Green Holds Labor Act Unnecessary

Chicago, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—The American Federation of Labor's executive council said tonight that pressure for higher wages was certain to mount, unless the cost of living was reduced and stabilized promptly, but it definitely opposed restoration of price controls.

In a statement on price controls prepared at its regular quarterly meeting, the council said the burden of inflation fell heaviest upon the workers, "because wages cannot keep pace with rising prices."

"Unless the cost of living is promptly reduced and stabilized, pressure for higher wages is certain to mount," the council said.

At the same time, the council opposed proposals for restoration of Government price controls.

"It is ridiculous to suppose that the present Congress would approve such legislation," the statement said. "While the OPA was killed prematurely, it is now dead and cannot be revived."

"Government regulation and control of prices is abhorrent in a permanent solution of this pressing problem."

Green told a news conference called at the end of the council's all-day session that price control was "impractical." The answer, he said, is increased production.

The council called for a three-pronged battle against inflation—immediate revision of foreign export commitments, encouragement of increased production and expansion of transportation facilities.

The statement said the best way to increase production was to increase minimum wages "to a point commensurate with recent American living standards."

Green said the AFL had taken an official stand that the national minimum wage should be 75 cents an hour. He said the present minimum of 40 cents provided a weekly salary of only $16.

He added that the AFY could not prevail upon Congress to increase the minimum wage, because Congress was "too intent upon giving the people a good dose of the Taft-Hartley law."

He said the AFY was for "out and out" repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, even if it leaves the country without legislation and wipes out the Wagner Act.

"We functioned pretty well before we had a labor law, and we can do it again," he said.

A reporter told Green that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-author of the new law, had said today that the law would not be an issue in the next election.

"If he made that statement, he is the only man in the country with that point of view. If he feels that way, he might as well not make that Western trip. So far as the AFL is concerned, the Taft-Hartley Act will be the outstanding issue of the election."

The council said the United States should continue to extend all possible assistance to those countries which are willing to cooperate for the preservation of world peace, but added that American resources "are not inexhaustible."

Lucas Suggests Return Of Some Price Controls

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), Senate Democratic whip, said here today that it might be necessary to impose price control on some basic commodities "to stop this vicious inflationary spiral."

Lucas said he was not yet prepared to say whether he would sponsor such legislation, or if the Administration favored it, but "something has got to be done in the next six to nine months to stop this ruinous rise."

wheat and wheat flour constituted all but 255,000 tons.

This is the second largest single month's grain exports ever recorded. It was exceeded only by July's 1,930,000 tons. The major recipients were the occupied zones in Europe and Asia, 826,000 tons; countries participating in the United States foreign relief program, 199,000 tons, and the remainder, 736,000 tons to cash-paying governments. These included, the Netherlands, 77,000 tons; India, 72,000 tons; Belgium, 54,000, and the United Kingdom, 51,000.

The withdrawal of such huge amounts of wheat and flour from the Nation's markets at this time could not fail to affect grain, particularly wheat, prices.

Prices Seem Fantastic

The prices reached by corn yesterday seem fantastic to old-time traders. September deliveries jumpd from $2.53½ to $2.60¾. In the runaway market of World War I corn failed to reach $2 a bushel by a quarter of a cent. Today it is almost 30 per cent above the record high previous to this year.

Some Chicago brokers attributed part of the rise to a trade report that "realistic" Government officials handling the grain export program "are resigned to $4 a bushel wheat, probably by early next year."

The report forced shorts to rush to cover, and the buying wave was on.

At the Agriculture Department officials were quick to deny that they "are reconciled to any such fantastic price."

Speculators Active

The big corn futures market, the Agriculture Department admitted yesterday, is "composed primarily of speculative holdings" as reported in The Washington Post last Thursday.

"More than 90 per cent of all accounts in corn futures on the Chicago Board of Trade as of June 39," it added, "was held by speculators."

At the Department of Commerce, analysts pointed out that in spite of the 18 per cent drop in exports in June as compared with May, the export of goods and services in the second quarter of this year hit a new peacetime peak. The total was $5,300,000,000 equivalent to an annual rate of $21,200,000,000. Imports during that quarter were about the same as for the first quarter, or at an annual rate of 13 billion a year.

Treasury Gets 146 Millions in FDIC Repayment

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation yesterday turned over to the Treasury checks totaling $146,695,250.41, thereby repaying more than half the money provided to the FDIC to start the program of insuring bank deposits in 1934.

Officials said the money would help in paring down the $259,645,000,000 national debt.

The checks, presented by FDIC Chairman Maple T. Harl to Acting Secretary of the Treasury A. Lee Wiggins, repaid in full the more than 139 million dollars in FDIC capital subscribed by the 12 Federal Reserve Banks and nearly $7,500,000 of the 150 million dollars subscribed originally by the Treasury.

The repayment, suggested by the FDIC and authorized by Congress at its last session, puts the FDIC o nthe way to being an agency financed entirely by assessments on the banks to the deposits it insures.

George Frost, 59, Bladensburg, Md., who was struck by an automobile August 22 on Defense hwy. near Bladensburg, died at 7:05 p. m. last night in Casualty Hospital.

With Frost and also struck by the car was Mrs. Cedra Smith, 58, also of Bladensburg. Mrs. Smith died of her injuries the day after the accident.

The car which struck the two pedestrians was driven by Henry M. Botts, 22, of 224 14th st. se., according to Prince Georges County Police. Botts has been charged with reckless driving and manslaughter.

Hungry Britain Treats Legionnaires to Feast

London, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Food-short Britain tonight gave 150 members of the American Legion pilgrimage to Europe, a de luxe meal of broiled chicken and appropriate side dishes.

Defense Minister A. V. Alexander, presiding over the banquet, reminded the guests the role England played in the war. Outgoing Legion Comander Paul H. Griffiths replied briefly.

The "Pilgrims," first since 1937, will leave for Paris Thursday.

Horseman's 20 Gift Steeds Sought by 16,142 Children

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Maynard Dowell, Chicago executive, whose theme song always has been "Horses, Horses, Horses, Crazy Over Horses," found out today that 16,142 other people are, too.

Dowell, who has kept a stable since he was a boy, recently decided that the press of business was too great to permit him to give adequate attention to some 20 of his "pets." So he ran an advertisement in a Chicago newspaper offering the horses free "to horse lovers who can provide good homes and proper care."

Shortly thereafter, Dowell was called out of town on business. When he returned last night, he found 16,142 replies, most of them from children—and most of the children girls.

"I think I'd better go away again," he said.

"I've about decided the only way we can be fair about this is to put all the names in a hat and maybe draw 50, and then investigate. This thing has gotton all out of proportion."

Dowell, president of the American Standardized Building Corp., a steel fabricating concern, said that when he inserted the ad in a newspaper had written a story containing his home address and now "nobody gets any sleep."

Even the stable where his pets are quartered has been overrun wtih people anxious to look a gift horse in the mouth, he said.

Stassen Sees No Easy GOP Victory in 1948

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Harold E. Stassen, in announcing plans yesterday for a drive to capture the Republican nomination for President, foresaw a hard battle between the two great parties in '48.

Asked what he thought of GOP prospects, the 40-year-old former Minnesota Governor and wartime aide to Admiral William (Bull) Halsey, said:

"If the Republican Party presents a program that is humanitarian, liberal and constructive, it will win in 1948. It will not be an easy victory."

Stassen called a news conference in the Statler Hotel to announce formally that he would enter the Wisconsin presidential preference primary next April 6. At stake will be 27 delegates to the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia in June.

That Stassen would go into the Wisconsin primary had been taken for granted ever since he announced his candidacy back in December. He still remains the only aspirant who has actually thrown his hat in the ring.

Stassen, No. 2 choice for the Republican nomination in the Gallup Poll, said that the fight in the GOP was "wide open"—that no candidate had any delegates "in hand."

He said he would open his drive for delegates with a speech at a "major rally" in Milwaukee, Wis., on November 24. The speech will be broadcast nationally.

His prospective opponents in the Wisconsin primary, he thought, were Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

This primary in the Badger State has come to be regarded as a major test in the preconvention period. In 1944, it was a Waterloo for the late Wendell Willkie, who abandoned his campaign for the Presidency after being snowed under by Governor Dewey. The Hoosier crusader earlier boasted that he had the Republican nomination "in the bag."

Governor Dewey, though he insisted he didn't want his name to be entered in the Wisconsin primary in '44, got 15 delegates. Stassen, then in the Pacific, got four; MacArthur, three, and Willkie, none. Two delegates were unpledged.

Those whose business it is to watch Wisconsin politics say that, as of today, Governor Dewey looks like the best bet in the '48 primary. However, they are chary about what the situation will be like next April.

Fred Zimmerman, Secretary of State in Wisconsin, who headed up the Dewey slate of delegates in '44, has let it be known that he is "off" the New York Governor this time.

HAROLD E. STASSEN
Tosses it in formally

Stassen was asked yesterday to comment on an earlier statement that he "would not consider" a place on the GOP ticket as Dewey's running mate.

He said that he had been quoted correctly and that the statement still stood. He made it on July 27 in San Francisco, and a few days later, in Los Angeles, accused Dewey of failing to take a stand on major issues.

Asked whether he would accept the vice presidential nomination on a ticket with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Stassen grinned and said, "No comment."

Discussing his candidacy for the No. 1 prize, Stassen said that his major accomplishments since his announcement in December were two: (1) He had forced an "acceleration" of the Republican campaign, which he thought was good for the party and the country, (2) he had become reacquainted with Republican leaders throughout the country—leaders with whom he had lost contact while in the Navy.

Stassen told reporters that following his Milwaukee speech on November 24, he would step up the tempo of his drive for delegates. He said he had not yet made up his mind whether to enter primaries in States that are likely to have favorite-son candidates.

He said that he expected prices and related questions to play an important part in the '48 campaign. In listing other issues, he mentioned taxes, world economic policy, housing and health, the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, basic relations with Russia, future of the United Nations and Government economy.

"Do you accept the record of the Republican Congress as your platform?" he was asked.

"Not entirely," he replied.

"What would you leave out?"

"It is not a question of what to leave out," he said, "but of where do you go from here."

He said the extreme attacks made by labor leaders on the Taft-Hartley Act were not justified, and he predicted the rank and file of labor would support the law in a few years.

He said that aid to Europe under the Marshall Plan should be contingent on a promise from the countries over there not to move further toward socialization. He said, for example, that help for Britain should be conditioned on her not socializing the steel industry.

Stassen gave out the following itinerary for speeches this month:

Sept. 17—New York Chamber of Commerce luncheon at Waldorf Astoria Hotel, on world economic policy, and whether special session of Congress will be needed.
Sept. 19—New Hampshire editors and publishers dinner at Hampton Beach, N. H., with Massachusetts editors as guests. Conference with New England GOP leaders.
Sept. 20—Eastern States Agricultural Exposition—Grange Day—luncheon and national broadcast, Springfield, Mass.
Sept. 23—American Bar Association, Cleveland, broadcast on foreign policy.
Sept. 24—National police chiefs convention, Duluth, Minn.
Sept. 25—Annual Corn Palace celebration, Mitchell, S. Dak.
Sept. 28—Community meeting on religious education, Upper Montclair, N. J.
Sept. 29—Protestant council luncheon, New York City.

Taft Elated By AFL Stand On Red Oath

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, heading West to start his "pulse-taking" tour of coastal states, today bumped into his press contingent three days ahead of schedule.

The result was some mutual confusion and an informal press conference during which Ohio's "unannounced" presidential aspirant:

1. Reiterated his opposition to universal military training but promised "a positive statement on what we should do" in the course of his three-week Western tour.

2. Hailed AFL President William Green's recommendation that the Federation's 14-man executive council sign non-Communist affidavits as sustaining Taft's own contention that the Taft-Hartley Act "can't be made a successful issue."

3. Disclosed that he will not formally announce his decision "to run or not to run" until October 15 or 16, about two weeks after he winds up his canvass of Western sentiment in Casper, Wyo.

Two carloads of newsmen, scheduled to make their first contact with Taft Friday in Santa Cruz, Calif., located him prematurely in the Union League Club here.

Taft readily agreed to see them, confessed his "greate perturbation" is what to do about the large delegation of political reporters assigned to the trip. He had planned to make the tour alone, with his wife, Martha. Friends said he feared candidate-size press coverage would make it look like a "campaign" swing.

Before hopping a separate train for Santa Cruz tonight, the Senator breakfasted with Lieut. Cov. Hugh W. Cross of Illinois, lunched with Govfl Dwight Green, who reputedly has vice presidential ambitions, and chatted on the phone with Senator Wayland C. Brooks of Illinois, and Werner Schroeder, GOP National Committeeman.

So far as is known he did not personally contact Col. Robert McCormick. McCormick's Chicago Tribune recently has shown Taft leanings by taking editorial pot shots at most of the other GOP possibilities.

His comment on universal military training followed a reporter's reminder that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey has come out unconditionally for training America's young men.

"I have always been opposed to universal training and I haven't changed my mind," Taft said. "I have some very definite ideas about what we ought to do. I expect to say something positive about them later on."

Taft remarked that he favors a standing army of about one million men, adding: "I think we have only 900,000 men now."

Quoted in Columbus, Ohio, Monday as saying he didn't see how the Taft-Hartley Act could be made an issue, he told reporters he meant to say he did not think it could be made a "successful" issue.

"There's nothing in it you can make an issue of except the name," he quipped.

He said "The CIO is trying to make it an issue, but doesn't Green's statement knock the props out from under them?"

Green, here to attend AFL executive council meetings at the Drake Hotel, has recommended that the group sign affidavits that they are not Communists, as required by the Taft-Hartley law. He predicted that the council would vote unanimously to go along "reluctantly" with that recommendation.

School Lunches To Double Here Despite Fund Cut

Twice as many District schools will receive full free lunch aid this year as last year, despite a $76,669 slash in national school lunch program allotments here, Harry N. Gardner, program supervisor, declared yesterday.

The Agriculture Department, which makes the aid allotments, announced Monday that the District's program share this school year would be $132,725, as compared with $209,394 last year.

Gardner said major subsidy cuts eliminated equipment rather than food funds and that the remaining allotment would be augmented with whole food from the Agriculture Department. A carload of potatoes and 209 cases of concentrated orange juice have already been promised for use in the lunch program here, he said.

Only 14 schools participated in the program last year, using less than $55,000 of the funds alloted, he pointed out.

The Gallup Poll

Truman, Dewey, Wallace Labor Union '48 Favorites

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 9.—Ten months before the 1948 presidential nomination, three labor union members out of every four polled by the Institute expressed a preference in candidates, while one-fourth indicated no choice or no opinion.

President Truman is the most popular with those expressing a choice. Thomas E. Dewey is second and Henry A. Wallace third.

While an independent third party boom for Mr. Wallace is always a possibility—in fact he has himself continued to hint at a third party movement—Institute survey figures do not indicate that he is winning very widespread support as a candidate at present among union members. In fact, Harold E. Stassen almost equals him in numerical support among the rank and file of labor union members.

The poll questioned a cross-section of union members as follows:

"What man would you like to see elected President of the United States in 1948?"

Harry S. Truman	28%
Thomas E. Dewey	14
Henry A. Wallace	7
Harold E. Stassen	6
Gen. Dwight Eisenhower	4
Gen. Douglas MacArthur	2
Arthur Vandenberg	2
Earl Warren	2
Robert A. Taft	1
Others	8
No choice	26
	100%

In conducting the survey, interviewers used no check list of names to hand to voters; the answers to the question were all volunteered answers.

In the second part of the poll the labor union members were asked how they classified themselves politically—whether Democratic, Republican or Independent. Their candidate or preferences were then analyzed on the basis of their answer to this question.

Those union members who classify themselves as Democrats pick as their three leading choices Truman, Wallace and General Eisenhower, with Truman receiving four times as many votes as Wallace.

Those union members classifying themselves as Republicans named Dewey, Stassen and Eisenhower as their leading choices with Dewey far ahead in number of votes cast.

* * * *

IT WILL be seen that General Eisenhower has appeal as a candidate both to union members who consider themselves Republicans and to those who say they are Democrats. The same phenomenon has also been found in recent Institute polls of the whole population.

As reported on several occasions the general, although not among the top four or five in popularity today as a possible candidate, consistently holds support from voters in both Democratic and Republican ranks. At the same time the country does not, by and large, know how to place the general politically. One fifth of voters polled recently said they think he is a Democrat and another one fifth said he was Republican. The rest confessed that they don't know what he is.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Army Asks ICC To Continue Va. Bus Transfers

The War Department yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to continue transfer privileges between the Capital Transit Co. and two Virginia bus lines serving commuters between Washington and nearby Virginia Government buildings.

The Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co. and the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co. have petitioned ICCC to discontinue the joint-line fares. They contend that the Capital Transit Co. is asking for a larger share of the rate, which would make operation unprofitable for them.

The War Department asked the petitions be denied because they do not raise the issue reasonableness of rates, but of jurisdictional questions already determined, or of divisions of rates which cannot be determined in the present proceedings.

Man Fined $35 In Police Case

against the officers who had arrested him.

The assault charge was nolle prossed by Municipal Judge George D. Neilson on the recommendation of Assistant U. S. Attorney John B. Diamond III.

Diamond told reporters:

"This was a very unfortunate incident in which a young boy had too much liquor to drink and at the time of his arrest he did not know what was going on. From the evidence I've heard the policeman merely used the necessary forces to keep the boy under control."

When he appeared before Judge Quinn, Jones pleaded guilty to the drunk and disorderly charges. Private Lewis took the stand to relate what had happened. Jones said he couldn't remember anything that happened because "I was too drunk."

"You were in the Navy three years," said Judge Quinn. "What do you think they would have done to you in the Navy?"

"They'd probably have kicked me out," conceded Jones.

The judge talked to the youth at length about the affair. He reviewed his past record of arrests for drunkenness.

"I don't know whether anything I have said is going to help you," said Judge Quinn, "but if this hasn't helped you, then you'll have to learn the hard way—and you can't win that way. Better men than you have tried it. They were unsuccessful, and you'll be unsuccessful too if you think you can do it."

Jones suffered two black eyes, a two-inch cut on his head and bruises about the legs and body in his fight with police. In court yesterday he still wore a patch on his forehead and there was a trace of a "shiner" on his left eye.

Judge Quinn fined him the maximum, $10 on the drunk charge and $25 on the disorderly conduct charge. He paid the fines.

would have a policeman fired for it. Other policemen have complained of being cursed, and one told reporters he had been spit upon when he arrested a drunk.

Meanwhile, Capt. Beverly Beach of the Seventh Precinct said that "criticism of a small minority" isn't going to prevent him or his men from arresting "any hoodlum that wants to use Georgetown for a hangout."

There have been a number of complaints in that precinct recently ranging from police discourtesy to brutality. In almost all cases, the policeman involved has countered wit ha like charge against the civilian who, it was alleged, was mistreated.

Confidence Man Jailed Once More

SAMUEL JUNGMAN

Glib Con Man In Jail Again

ported Jungman to the District Attorney's office.

Detective James Bryant, special investigator for the district attorney, said that he immediately went to the jail to find out what had happened. He found that Jungman had just finished doing 360 days on one false pretense charge and that he was to start on another 180-day sentence which had a $200 fine as an alternative when he was released.

Col. Curtis Reid, head of the jail, said that several months ago Jungman had approached him and told him that some of the inmates wanted to pay his fine and asked if it was possible for him to collect the money.

Reid told him that in view of the fact that prisoners were not allowed to have money in their possession while in the jail he could not grant that permission. A short while later Reid said money started arriving from attorneys representing other inmates to be deposited to Jungman's trust account.

ApparentlyG. Reid said, Jungman had talked the other inmates into having their attorneys send the money in. All together he said that $185 had been deposited.

Bryant said that after a three weeks search he traced Jungman to where he was employed at the Uline Arene, 3rd & M ne. He was arrested there Monday afternoon. While booking Jungman at the First Precinct station, Bryant asked him how he got the money to pay his way out of jail.

Jungman replied, "My friends at the jail gave it to me."

Bryant then asked, "Well, how come they paid your fine and no one elses."

Nazi Kidnaper Of Mussolini Is Acquitted

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 9 (AP). A United States military court in Dachau today acquitted towering, scar-faced Otto Skorzeny, Hitler's private kidnaper and Jack of all rough trades on the grounds that they had violated no rules of war.

The SS colonel, who first leaped into world prominence by kidnaping Benito Mussolini at Hitler's command, was found innocent on a charge of sending German troops into combat behind Allied lines disguised in American uniforms in the Battle of the Bulge in December, 1944.

Skorzeny had testified in the three-weeks trial that the main body of his 150th Brigade, specially organized for a mission in the battle, never got into combat. His defense counsel, Lieut. Col. Robert Durst of Springfield, Mo., had argued that the wearing of American uniforms was a legitimate ruse of war for espionage and sabotage.

The military court upheld this view despite an affidavit from Gen. Omar Bradley, then Twelfth Army group commander, that American troops never had worn German uniforms.

It is expected that Skorzeny will be turned over to German civil authorities for trial as a colonel in the SS and for denazification proceedings.

During the Battle of the Bulge it was reported that Skorzeny and picked crews had the special mission of trying to find and assassinate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. This was later denied by Skorzeny and Allied investigators.

Girl Stowaway Taken Here Sent To Ellis Island

Sunzanne Marie Revel, 20-year-old French stowaway who ended up last week in Washington, was sent to Ellis Island, N. Y., yesterday, until Immigration officials complete study of her case.

A hearing was held Monday at the Women's Bureau here, according to Charles E. Frank, officer in charge o fthe Immigration and Naturalization Service's District office. A report must be studied at the District office, then forwarded to headquarters in Philadelphia for action, he said.

Meanwhile, Miss Revel will remain at Ellis Island. The French girl stowed away on a freighter bound for America from Cherbourg. She was turned over to the Women's Bureau last week, after coming here from New York by train and applying for help at the Traveler's Aid Society, Union Station.

AFL Choice

Wholly aside from the merits or demerits of the anticommunist provision of the Taft-Hartley Act, we think that the decision of AFL President Green to sign the prescribed affidavit manifests good judgment. First, it indicates a willingness to observe the law of the land even when it is distasteful. Second, it is good business for the AFL. If the Green policy prevails, AFL unions will be in good standing before the National Labor Relations Board. Especially in jurisdictional disputes in which the NLRB is asked to supervise an election this will be an advantage of the greatest importance.

Chiefly for the latter reason we suspect that the executive council of the AFL will follow Mr. Green's leadership in this matter, and it will not be at all surprising if the officers of the CIO decide to do likewise. Many union leaders who have no association whatever with communism have vowed that they will not sign the affidavit. But most of their vows were made in anger and resentment against the union-curbing bill passed by the last Congress. When it comes to an actual choice between signing the noncommunist pledge and sacrificing the protection that the law still provides for organized collective bargaining, practical considerations weigh heavily in favor of the former course. And to the extent that that course results in the ouster of communist officials, the unions will be better off for it.

In Fort Worth, Tex., a Federal judge has upheld the ruling of NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham requiring anticommunist affidavits of officers of the parent labor federations, the AFL and CIO, as well as of local and industry-wide unions. We continue to think that this was an unnecessarily sweeping interpretation of the law and to hope that a test case will be carried to the Supreme Court. Meanwhile, however, general compliance with this and other provisions of the law is much to be desired as a means of maintaining orderly labor relations and of demonstrating promptly what sections of the Taft-Hartley Act ought to be modified.

Rise Of The Diesel

The decline of the steam locomotive on American railroads is now in full swing. As of July 1, only 63 steam locomotives and one electric locomotive had been delivered this year as compared with 354 diesels. On the same date 765 diesel locomotives were on order, whereas railroads had contracted for only 24 new steam and five new electric units. These figures are dramatic evidence of a trend which had started well before the war but was accentuated by the war's end when railroads began to replace worn motive power in earnest. Gas-electric cars displaced steam locomotives for short hauls on some lines as long as a generation ago, but before, say, 1939, the development of the twin diesel engine, except for switching service, was largely confined to new streamlined passenger trains. Now many of the orders are for multiple-unit diesel locomotives for freight use. Actually the term "diesel" is a misnomer. The new locomotives are diesel-electric; they rely on diesel motors to run generators, and the actual motive power is supplied by electricity.

There are a number of reasons for the change. Diesels are generally credited with great hauling power, greater operating efficiency and less operating cost than their steam counterparts. Some railroads are now becoming completely dieselized on this account. Another reason is that before the war the railroads were in sad financial condition and were not replacing locomotives as rapidly as they wore out. The sudden rash of diesels reflects in some degree the bettered condition of many railroads as a result of wartime traffic. Then, too, a possible factor in the plans of some railroads has been the depredations of John L. Lewis in closing down the coal supply. Some few lines remain loyal to coal and continue to rely on steam, and several are experimenting with gas turbines and other streamlined and modernized versions. But these are primarily roads which themselves are large coal haulers.

The influx of diesels, of course, does not mean the immediate disappearance of the belching, billowing steam giant that has become legion in picture books. It takes a long time to replace locomotives, and undoubtedly there will be no famine of steam prototypes in the Washington area for some time to come, especially on such roads as the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac. At the same time, diesels already are becoming commonplace on the Southern and the Baltimore & Ohio, to mention only two users serving Washington. While the present crop of railroad fans probably is secure in its faith in the standard steam "hog," the sons of this generation had better begin accustoming themselves to a new idol.

Taft's Timing

Senator Taft told reporters at Columbus that he can see no reason for a special session of Congress this fall and at the same time asserted that he and other members were not sufficiently advised on the foreign situation. In such a combination of statements it seems to us that the chief significance attaches to his lack of information. We must not discount the possibility that, when he is fully informed as to the growing crises in Europe, Senator Taft will favor the prompt return of Congress to deal with the problem. Meanwhile, however, his apparent opposition to a special session has gone into the headlines, and he has undoubtedly been written down, so far as the casual reading public is concerned, as standing in opposition to the grant of emergency relief to western Europe.

This seems to us unfortunate even from the viewpoint of Senator Taft's own timetable. He notes that the Harriman report on the resources which this country can draw upon to aid in reconstruction abroad will not be finished until October 15. About the same time, reports from the Paris conference summoned to study the Marshall Plan should be available and congressional groups studying the European situation will be returning. Senator Taft concludes that the Committee on Foreign Relations should meet to study the findings thus presented, but he doesn't think it would be ready to report before January.

The idea of this committee mulling over a world emergency for two and a half months seems fantastic. During that period our bounteous wheat crop, part of which ought to be sent to Europe to prevent starvation, would be dissipated in the form of feed for livestock. Congress could then do little because it would be too late. On the other hand, if the two congressional committees dealing with foreign affairs should begin their hearings shortly after October 15, the emergency part of the program could be ready for action by November 1. The entire Congress could then be assembled with a saving of two months' time.

Certainly, Senator Taft said, there is no reason for a special session on domestic affairs. That view would scarcely be open to challenge if the entire regular session could be given to domestic affairs. But if emergency bills for European relief plus implementation of the Marshall Plan should be added to the heavy schedule of domestic legislation, it is doubtful whether Congress could get through all the work expected of it before the political campaigns get under way. Senator Taft himself pointed out in his address of August 1 that "extensive programs sponsored by Republicans to provide Federal aid to States and local communities in the fields of health, education and housing" await attention at the coming session. We do not see how Congress could do justice to legislation in those fields in addition to handling appropriations bills, universal military training and European aid in six months. What is needed is a special session at the earliest moment so that plans for European food relief can be laid before it.

Horror In India

The numbers of persons slain in the interreligious rioting in India and Pakistan are now estimated in the scores of thousands, and from every account the tempo of rioting and merciless butchery is increasing. Over very large areas of both countries a condition of lawlessness and industrial stagnation prevails which is most accurately described as downright anarchy.

In some sections the constituted authorities in an effort to regain control of the situation have resorted to measures of counterviolence. They have attacked the rioters with bullets and grenades. The summary execution of civilians caught with weapons has been announced by both Premier Nehru of India and Premier Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan. The flight of the Untouchables from the areas of rioting, and the consequent neglect of all sanitation, has created conditions favorable to the spread of cholera and the other grandiose epidemics for which Asia has been notorious. Upward of a million men, women and children, members of Moslem minorities in Hindu areas and Hindus and Sikhs in Moslem areas have been forcibly transplanted to refugee camps, and it is by no means surprising to read that, after only three weeks of independence cries have arisen for the restoration of the British Raj or that in Lahore the statue of Queen Victoria was found covered with flowers.

But of the return of the British there is, of course, not the slightest possibility. Britain, in the grip of an economic crisis as desperate in its way as the religio-political crisis in India, could not conceivably provide the money and troops necessary to restore order and tranquillity. Thus the situation in India is in some respects analogous to that of Britons in the early fifth century, when harassed by Picts and Scots from the north and Irish and Germanic pirates from the sea, they pleaded vainly for the return of the Roman legions. But in other respects the Indian situation appears not unlike that of the early eighteenth century, when the British East India Company, with a mere handful of troops, was able to consolidate its dominion. In other words, it is a situation that appears to invite conquest; and doubtless those British pukka sahibs who have so long insisted that within historic times there has never been an Indian government that was not founded upon conquest from the outside, find a melancholy satisfaction in contemplating this sudden debacle of the Indian independence movement.

Meanwhile Mr. Gandhi continues to fast and Pandit Nehru to make proclamations; but it seems doubtful that either can now exert anything like the influence on the rioting Indian masses that they have exerted on the Western imagination.

Pension Grabs

The Veterans of Foreign Wars have voted to make pensions for World War 1 veterans their major legislative objective for the coming year. Congressman Van Zandt, a former VFW commander in chief, is sponsoring a bill to provide pensions of $75 per month for these veterans when they reach 65. Addressing members of the organization assembled at Cleveland, Mr. Van Zandt asked whether the American people were going to turn down a request of this kind after spending billions for aid to foreign nations.

We only wish his indignation had been reserved for a worthier cause, and that he had stopped to reflect that the greater our outlays for the relief of the helpless and destitute of other lands, the more necessary it becomes to avoid unnecessary domestic outlays. In any case, there is no justification for handing out pensions to millions of veterans, most of whom are quite as well able to save for old age as nonveterans and have the same protection accorded other workers under our social insurance systems.

Mr. Van Zandt estimates that the proposed pension system would cost about 775 million dollars in the first year, rising eventually to a peak of about 2 billion annually. We are not interested in such computations, because it is a foregone conclusion that if the veterans of World War I were given pensions, the veterans of World War II, who are much more numerous, would likewise demand pensions. And we fail to see how their request could, in justice, be refused. So the cost of pensioning off our World War veterans would in time reach formidable figures and constitute a charge on the public for decades to come.

The country has dealt generously with its disabled veterans and has provided benefits for the able-bodied that will help them to overcome the handicaps of temporary withdrawal from civilian life. The politicians who angle for veterans' votes by dangling the tempting bait of pensions for all before them are, in our opinion, public enemies of a peculiarly dangerous sort. For they appeal to a spirit of greed and self-seeking, debase our conception of the nature of patriotism, and by their callous disregard of the burden laid upon the public by extravagant pension systems jeopardize the interests of those disabled veterans who are richly deserving of liberal pensions.

Full Circle

The Jews whose exodus from Germany was intercepted by the British are back where they started from. Some 4000 of them have now been pushed and clubbed from the holds of three transports at Hamburg and incarcerated in the Poppendorf Detention Camp. None of this can seem very strange to them. They are familiar with hatred, with rubber truncheons, with barbed wire. They are familiar with Germany: some millions of their fellow Jews, unable to wait for the forces of liberation, died there in recent years. What an apt, if unimaginative, sense of history the British government must have to bring these refugees back to the very source of all their suffering.

One may say, to be sure, that the senselessness of British brutality is but a response to the senselessness of Jewish violence. The day before the debarkation of the refugees, some Stern gang terrorists were arrested by the Surete Nationale in France, charged with a plot to bomb London with leaflets, and even with explosives, from the air. But there is this important difference between the two: The Jewish terrorists are irresponsibles; the Stern gang has no more than about 800 active members, and it is as roundly condemned by the Jewish authorities in Palestine as by the British themselves. What was done at Hamburg, however, was done upon the instructions of the British government by troops of the regular British army.

We wonder how the British government expects this incident to be recorded in the pages of history. Do they suppose that it will add luster to England's name? Do they think that this triumph of British military might over women and children and unarmed men will swell the glory of England's arms? Historians can scarcely fail to take note of the fact that the event occurred not before but after the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine had recommended immediate admission of 150,000 Jewish refugees to the Holy Land. And historians may well note, too, a trivial yet not wholly insignificant detail reported by the Associated Press: "German residents watched curiously from a nearby hillside."

Aid to Europe

There seems to be more than a suspicion that the much publicized sudden deterioration in the economic condition abroad, which is said to require the United States to start sending more food to Europe immediately, has been manufactured by the Administration in order to take up the slack caused by the new British ban on imports from the United States and to prevent any reduction in food prices in this country. Everything this Administration does seems designed to produce inflation of prices and simultaneous inflation of wages. It seems to me that before Congress gives the Administration another blank check for Europe it should provide that a bipartisan board be established to see that Government purchases of food and other commodities to be sent to Europe should be conducted so that United States prices are not disrupted thereby.

If the President is really interested in European relief and not in producing inflation in the United States, why did he not suggest that the new Inter-American organization take the responsibility of European relief, with each country bearing its full share in accordance with its ability? Even the smaller nations might wish to help out and to get credit for their assistance. This would take the sting out of the Red slogan of "dollar diplomacy." And, incidentally, when, as and if this relief is eventually stopped, the European nations would then not be so free to single us out for vituperation.

Austrian Schools

Mr. Hechinger's article on the Austrian school system in The Washington Post of September 7 should not remain uncorrected.

Austria's schools were not "limited to a small percentage of the population." Elementary schooling has been free and universal for about 200 years. High schools and universities are public; they require only nominal tuition fees which are invariably remitted to any promising student whose family would be unable to afford payment. Moreover, parents of gifted children, whether they be factory hands, peasants, or small clerks, need not worry whether the children could afford the "right" college; the state universities are attended by rich and poor alike. It is true that the universities have more than their share of children of well-to-do and professional people, but this is true everywhere and the proportion of students coming from poor families probably is greater in Austria than in the United States.

Thus the Austrian school system, far from "guaranteeing the maintenance of a stratified social system," actually was one of the cradles of progressive education, especially in the city of Vienna, which was during the interwar period and has been again since liberation run by a Socialist administration. Under such circumstances, it is not astonishing that Austrian schoolmen refuse politely but firmly to be "educated" by well-meaning but misinformed American "headmasters abroad."

Taxing Cooperatives

Margery Krimont's letter on "Consumer Cooperatives Investigation" in The Washington Post of September 6 poses some interesting questions.

By organizing consumer cooperatives many relatively small groups of people all over the country are able, in effect, to escape paying their full share of the cost of operating the Government because their cooperatives do not pay "profit" taxes. Private enterprise considers such taxes a part of the cost of selling its goods, adds them to the price of its goods and thus its customers virtually pay them.

Suppose all business in this country were converted suddenly into consumer cooperatives, would not there be a very considerable loss in public revenues? The expense of operating the Government would still be the same, so what would happen? Obviously income taxes would have to be raised so there would no net gain. But when a few groups of citizens are able to so organize the loss in tax revenue is small and they are thus able to benefit at the expense of the vast majority who are not in a position, or do not choose to buy through a cooperative organization.

Disregarding the effect of cooperatives on private enterprise, it seems to me that some method of assessing taxes against cooperatives on an equal basis with private enterprise will have to be devised, regardless of whether the cooperative's operating profit is actually a profit.

Housing Problem

In its internal policies our Nation appears to be fighting the shadow of communism and ignoring its substance.

We, for instance, fight its shadow when we require officials of unions to disclaim belief in or connection with communism. We ignore its substance when we allow the power of the State to be used arbitrarily to compel the owner of a dwelling to rent his property at a rental fixed when the costs of construction and maintenance were substantially lower.

There can hardly be any question but that the Nation's housing situation constitutes a major problem. Sociologists and criminologists are agreed that nothing contributes more to the breakdown of self-respect and, as a consequence, to a disregard of law and the rights of others, than bad and crowded housing.

It is a problem that we must deal with as a Nation, and it seems to me we ought to deal with it in a manner befitting a Nation in which, in theory at any rate, the State is responsible to the individual as well as the individual being responsible to the State. Herein, it seems to me, lies the real distinction between the free and the totalitarian state.

Iranian Needs

The announcement last week that Iranian Princess Ashraf is to begin study of District welfare agencies is interesting. Having served in the Princess' country during the war, I am led to wonder what the Princess expects to gain by the study of District welfare agencies. The worst District slum family is far better off than 95 per cent of Persian families.

I respectfully suggest that two things are more needed than slum-clearance in Iran: food and medical care.

German Production

Recent discussions of our German policy have been wide of the mark on several points. First, it is not correct to say, as it has been said by several leading journalists, that "all western Europe" is united in opposing the lifting of the restrictions which now hold down German industrial activity. The lifting of these restrictions has been demanded, more or less clearly, by the governments of Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxemburg and Italy.

The Netherlands memorandum to the Moscow conference, which has been made public, explicitly rejects the notion of gaining security through crippling German industries. Very sensibly it seems to reach that goal by removing artificial barriers between the economy of Germany and the economy of her neighbors. This would suffice to exclude the possibility of economic autarchy, without which the German economy could not become a war economy. The Netherlands Newsletter of November 15, in rather vigorous terms, gives details concerning the Dutch stake in the Germany economy. Similar data could be given for a number of other countries, including Greece and Turkey. It is indeed doubtful whether the economic assistance which we are now extending to these countries can replace the losses which they had to take as a result of the virtual ending of their German trade; Germany was the best customer as well as the best supplier for both countries.

French opposition to the lifting of restrictions upon German industry is real enough, but does certainly not reflect a unanimous public opinion. There remain people in France who believe in the policies of Briand rather than in those of Poincare. In the aftermath of this war they can no more assert themselves than their predecessors could assert themselves in 1919 or in 1923. The time may come, however, when what now is a minority will be a majority again. Besides, if the French surrender to a policy of fear, does it follow that we must join them? Or should we not keep our heads and demonstrate that a policy of economic sanity is a policy of political sanity as well? France's true security lies in continued cooperation with the United States, and this cooperation will be put to a severe test if French fears cause us to adopt policies which are uneconomic and, for this reason, unnecessarily expensive. The prospective cost of the Marshall Plan has already evoked comments expressed in terms such as "operation rathole." The less aid and comfort we give to such apprehensions, the better it is for all concerned.

What is wrong with the new level of industry plan for Western Germany is not that it allows Germany too much industry, but that it does not go far enough in the direction of abandoning old illusions. It constitutes only a point on the retreat from misconceived and unworkable policies. Conditions in western Germany, and in all of Europe, are so desperate that no restrictions upon productive capacity not directly devoted to the manufacture of the implements of war can be tolerated for long unless catastrophic results are to be brought about.

It is a pity that Mr. Herbert Hoover's report on German reconstruction has scarcely become known to the general public. Those who read the full text of this report, rather than the attacks upon it, will realize how urgent is the need for action along the lines recommended by Mr. Hoover.

Parking Injustice

Down on Indiana ave between 6th and 7th sts., there is half a block on the south side of the street with parking meters, while the other half of the same block has no meters. The irony of it is that parking on the metered half is for 20 long minutes while parking on the unmetered half is for a whole hour. The fellow in the unmetered zone can park a whole hour without "violating" any regulation, whereas the fellow who parks in the meter half of the same block will have to pay 15 cents for the same length of time. If he does not happen to be there when the meter turns red (every 20 minutes) he is fined. There really is not much difference between the two parking areas except where the man-made signs and meters are concerned.

This is just an example of the unfair treatment afforded by existing D. C. parking regulations. I think the public and those behind these regulations should be told.

Slow German Revival

BERLIN.—This is a strange world, this Germany that is a long, rusting ruin in which people are gradually beginning to come back to waking life. In once-proud Tiergartenstrasse, the nicked and battered statue of Richard Wagner sits in what is now a cabbage garden, looking out on the blackened shells of what were the houses of Berlin's rich and mighty.

Wagner, who wrote the wildly romantic music that was Hitler's inspiration, has seen his Gotterdammerung. The old gods are dead. But their evil bequest is everywhere.

From both Americans and Germans the impression is clear that the hatreds born of nazism are still very much alive. One of the best-informed Germans I've talked with is a man who holds a responsible position with the Russian administration in Germany. He travels extensively in the Russian zone and he has access to the Western zones. He was an anti-Nazi. I asked him:

"What do you think would happen in Germany if, in one month, Russians, British, French and Americans should move out?"

"I am afraid," he replied, "that the concentration camps would be opened again and the killing of the Communists and the Jews would start all over again."

ALTHOUGH no one else has put it quite so bluntly, that appears to be a fairly common opinion. It goes back to the ancient fear and distrust of the Russians which was fanned into psycho-pathology by the Nazis. Today the conduct of the Russians in stripping their zone, accentuated in the German mind by every sort of rumor, is reviving the old hatred.

Occupation for a long period would seem to be essential to any order in Germany. Yet occupation of a divided Germany is difficult to the point of being impossible.

It is just here that two questions with respect to United States policy come in. No. 1 is the question of how long we intend to stay in Germany. The Germans in the American sector in Berlin and in the American zone are deeply apprehensive on this score. Rumors are constantly circulating that the Americans intend to depart.

If we could somehow make clear our intentions we would go a long way toward promoting stability in the United States-British zones. Integration of western Germany in a plan for the rehabilitation of Europe would be a big step forward.

Question No. 2 is the American attitude toward the displaced persons. Perhaps the greatest single blow to American Military Government in Germany was the failure of Congress to adopt the Stratton bill. Passage of that bill would have been a signal to the world that we were willing to do our share in easing an intolerable burden.

The physical burden of the DP camps is difficult but not insuperable. The real burden is a psychological one. To enforce on 800,000 persons the conviction that they are not wanted anywhere in the world is a cruelty so terrible as to be beyond comprehension. Yet that was the essential meaning of the failure of Congress to act.

At the same time this is a practical and immediate problem for the American administration. The DPs naturally feel deeply resentful of the treatment the world has accorded them. They take out that resentment, whenever they can, on the German population. Thus makes for the utmost ill will on both sides.

A great deal depends, of course, on the coming winter. In some respects the situation today is better than it was a year ago. German householders have had an opportunity to store some coal for house heating.

SLOWLY AND PAINFULLY the relations between Germany and the countries around her are being reestablished. The economics division of military government has done a remarkable job of rebuilding trade relations—piecing together the threads that were once the basis for the commerce of Europe.

On the other hand, industry has less coal stored for production than a year ago. Gradually during the past two years, the Germans have been using up the surpluses they accumulated when they were masters of Europe.

On top of this, the drought of recent weeks upset the best-laid plans of mice and men. It has come like one of the last plagues that fell on Job, a kind of Biblical visitation of new suffering. A comparatively mild winter, combined with the recent spurt in coal production, would be a boon to the Americans who are trying to make some sense out of the ruined Reich.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Shape Of German Future

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 9.—With an almost shuddering reluctance the makers of American foreign policy are facing up to the facts of the European crisis. The decision to call a special session of Congress has already in effect been made, lacking only the final approval of President Truman and Secretary of State George C. Marshall. It is virtually certain that this approval will be forthcoming, however unwillingly, if only because the facts so clearly demand it. At the same time, an almost equally important decision of another kind has also been taken.

This decision is to take the initiative with the British in trying to work out some sensible agreement on the British dollar burden in Germany. Where the talks on this problem will take place, and who will participate, is still undecided. But it is very likely that Secretary Marshall will himself raise the subject with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, if Bevin decides to come to the New York meetings of the United Nations General Assembly, or with Minister of State Hector McNeil, if McNeil comes to New York instead of Bevin.

IN RECENT WEEKS British officials have been busily throwing out numerous hints to the effect that Britain can no longer afford to support half the dollar requirements of the merged Anglo-American zone in Germany. There have been no official communications on the subject. But in point of fact, neither units nor official communications are necessary.

Simple arithmetic suffices. The British government cannot afford to pour millions of dollars into the feeding of Germans, while the British people themselves are on desperately short rations for the lack of dollars.

This has been clear for weeks. The real danger has been that the British cabinet, faced with an almost impossible economic situation, might suddenly decide to abandon Germany completely, in a sudden frenzy of desperation. It is to avert this disaster that the American policy makers have now decided to act first, before disaster happens.

It is easy to understand the deep reluctance with which they have come to this decision. For they will have Congress to deal with. The British have unofficially made it clear that they cannot afford to support the dollar drain in Germany beyond the new year, and probably not beyond December 1. This means that Marshall and his subordinates will have to go to Congress, cap in hand, almost as soon as Congress convenes, to ask for a new appropriation to carry the British share of the dollar load. They will have to do so, moreover, just as Congress is being asked to provide the great sums required for the Marshall project. This is a somewhat appalling prospect. Yet there is nothing else that can be done. It is at least fortunate that the State Department planners have faced that fact.

While the American planners have been making this reluctant decision the French have also been making up their minds. Informally but clearly, the French leaders have indicated to American officials that if the November Foreign Conference ends like its predecessors in weary stalemate, the French will be willing to merge their zone with the Anglo-American zone in Germany.

To be sure, they will want certain security guarantees. Secretary Marshall will undoubtedly renew the Byrnes offer of a four-power, 40-year pact against Germany aggression, which the Russians rejected, on a three-power basis. But pact or no pact, the French could hardly sleep easily by night if the occupation troops were withdrawn from western Germany while Russian troops remained in Eastern Germany. Thus the French are expected to ask for a guaranteed occupation of Western Germany, at least as long as the Soviets continue to occupy their zone. In their own self-interest, the American and British governments are likely to agree.

THUS, BARRING a miraculous Soviet change of heart in November, the shape of the German future is beginning to emerge dimly from the fog. There will be, for the foreseeable future, two Germanies. Already the Western region has been dubbed "Trizonia" by the technicians. A separate peace treaty will be concluded between the Western powers and Trizonia, and a separate Trizonian currency will come into existence. The frontier of Trizonia will be on the Elbe, and it will be the main barrier between the Soviet world and the West. It will perhaps be fortified, and certainly guarded by military force, for a very long time to come.

One question remains—whether the Western powers will try to maintain their tiny sectors in Berlin, deep in the Russian zone. The disposition among the American planners is to do so, both for intelligence purposes and for reasons of German morale. The final decision rests with the Soviets. If they think it worth the risk, and if they wish to squeeze the Western powers out of Berlin, they can certainly do so.

Under any circumstances, Western Germany will become the apparently permanent ward of the three Western powers. The preeminent power will, of course, be the United States, since the United States will pay the bills. Thus we shall be saddled, most unwilling and for as long as any man can foresee, with a sort of vast colonial empire in the heart of Europe. That is one of the stranger by-products of the great contest which the Soviet Union has initiated with the West.

Italian Paradoxes

AN AMERICAN tourist arriving in Italy after having visited England and France feels relaxed and happy.

Italian shops are overloaded with pure silks, hand-embroidered linen and fine leather goods of prewar quality, sold freely to everybody who can pay the multiplied-by-40 prewar prices. Italian restaurants tempt the American tourist with prewar meals. And the American tourist can obtain all the liras he needs to enjoy Italy's charm and luxuries, by selling his travelers' cheques to the cashier of his hotel, or to the first foreign exchange broker around the corner, at the so-called free rate—which may be the double, or even higher, of the regular rate—an action which in France would cost him a very heavy fine and perhaps even bring him into jail.

Italy is, indeed, an American tourist's paradise. But it is a much less wonderful country for the Italians. The middle classes, especially civil servants and white-collar workers, have a much harder time there than in any other western European country, France included. In France, inflation multiplied prewar prices by 12 or 15, while salaries went only five or six times higher. In Italy, where the prewar prices have been multiplied by 40, millions of Italians are earning only six or eight times more than they did before the war.

THE AMERICAN visitor cannot fail to notice the similarity of Italian and French problems. Italy and France have, indeed, many ills in common: inflation, with its ruining effect upon the middle classes; dependence on foreign aid and foreign imports for the restoration of their national economy; and predominance of the Communist Party, which, in both countries, has been eliminated from the government but which, in both countries, continues to control the trade-unions.

As in France, the workers in Italy cannot have their wages adjusted to the inflated prices; but they try to reduce as much as possible the existing gap between the low wages and the ever higher prices. As in France, the peasants and the industrialists in Italy defend themselves, and some of them even succeed in enriching themselves, by paying off in depreciated currency their mortgages, debenture stock, and banking credits. As in France, the government and industry look toward the United States for dollars to buy the indispensable foodstuff, coal, oil, and various raw materials. And as in France, the anti-Communist Italians, who constitute the majority of the population, look toward the United States for protection against Soviet expansion.

ECONOMICALLY, Italy, which has so few natural resources, is unquestionably worse off than France. To cover her needs in fuel, she depends almost entirely on imports from abroad. Politically, Italy suffers from the suspension of democracy by fascism over a period of two decades. The younger Italian generation does not understand what democracy means. Many peasants, after having participated for the first time in their life in a democratic election, are sincerely surprised to hear that there is going to be another election.

Italian political leaders are recruited mostly among older men. Sr. Nenni, who tragically split the Italian Socialist Party by bringing its majority into complete subservience to the Communist Party headed by the extremely able and shrewd Palmiro Togliatti, has rendered the greatest possible disservice both to his party and to his country. If Sr. Nenni had the statesmanship and the wisdom of the French Socialist leader, Leon Blum, the Italian political situation would be quite different. The minority group of the Italian Socialist Party, headed by Sri. Sarragate, Silone and Lombardo, is doing its best trying to reduce the damage caused by Sr. Nenni's blind collaboration with the Communists; but, unfortunately, it does not have much influence with the Italian trade-unions. At the latest conference of the Italian trade-unions in Florence, the Communist-controlled unions had two million members; the pro-Communist, Socialist (Nenni) unions had about one million members; the Christian Democratic-controlled unions, about 700,000 and the anti-Communist, Socialist unions, below 100,000 members.

According to all indications, the Communists in Italy have not yet begun to lose their prestige with the intellectuals and the workers, as is the case in France. Many Italian political observers believe that, should the elections be held this fall, the Communists could increase their last year's strength from 2,200,000 to 2,500,000, or perhaps even to 2,700,000. Furthermore, intelligence reports indicate that the Communists have organized insurrectional units in the provinces of Modena, Reggio Emilia, Parma, Piacenze and Bologna, which are ready to strike at the first signal from the Soviet center and thus facilitate the invasion of Italy by the Yugoslav army. The Italians, who have been disarmed by the peace treaty, feel extremely uneasy at the idea that Communist-controlled Yugoslavia has no restrictions on her military forces.

The majority of the non-Communist Italians are certainly grateful to their Christian Democratic Prime Minister, Sr. De Gasperi, for his efforts to maintain Italy's precarious political and economic equilibrium; and they follow with sympathy the efforts of their Foreign Minister, Count Carlo Sforza, to help Italy secure the best possible place in the Western world community. But just as the non-Communist Frenchmen doubt that their middle-of-the-road coalition government can succeed, the Italians express similar doubts about the success of their coalition government. And while the French can comfort themselves by the idea that they have in General de Gaulle's movement a second line of defense, the Italians do not even have this comfort.

WHY, THEN, do the Italians feel less unhappy than the French? The answer to that perplexing question can be found, perhaps, in the fact that, unlike the French, the Italians are not undergoing the same deep psychological crisis. The French cannot forget the four years of Petain's Vichy government as easily as the Italians forgot the 20 years of Mussolini's fascism. Furthermore, France is going through a delicate period of adjustment to new international realities. One of the world's greatest powers at the end of World War I, France now suffers from being forced to look to the United States for both economic help and political protection. The Italians do not suffer from seeing Mussolini's "Imperial Dream" broken. They consider that having been compelled by their regime to start the war in the losing camp, they did not do badly by finding the courage to throw themselves, at the critical hour, into the camp of the victorious Allies. And they do not mind at all seeing the Americans, who led the Allied forces to victory, take over the leadership in the postwar world.

Italians realize that without 1½ billion dollars, which the United States has given to their country since the liberation, they would have been unable to rebuild their roads and railways and make their plants operate again. They know that when the last American dollar is exhausted by the end of this year, the Italian economy will face the gravest danger unless the Americans once more come to Italy's rescue. They know that on the day when the last of the 20,000 American soldiers still stationed in Italy, leaves the Italian soil, Italy will feel much more insecure than she does now. This is why the Italians are today the most pro-American people in western Europe.

Railroads Bid For Quick Rate Hike Is Fought

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Against bitter and formidable opposition, 699 railroads yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for an immediate 10 per cent freight rate increase to offset rising costs.

The railroads, seeking an average 27 per cent increase, urged the ICC to grant the 10 per cent rise without a formal hearing. This, they contended, would "just about" absorb last week's 15½-cent wage boost for nonoperating employes.

Leading the opposition was John S. Burchmore, attorney for the National Industrial Traffic League, representing major shippers, who suggested examination of the possibility that increased rates might result in less rather than more revenue for the roads. He told the commission it must "decide if the national economy will stand a continuance of the spiral" of rail wage increases followed by "automatic" rate increases.

Burchmore was followed by Frederick G. Hammley, general solicitor for the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, whose function parallels that of the ICC in the States. Hammley urged that no action be taken on any rate increase without "adequate hearings."

They were supported by spokesmen for the Department of Agriculture, the Fresh Fruits and Vegetable Industry, the Southern Traffic League, Chicago Board of Trade, Cement Shippers, National Coal Association, Dry Fruit and Canning Industry, Cigar Manufacturers Association, American Newspaper Publishers Association, United States Brewer Foundation, and a number of automobile manufacturers.

So many were on hand to oppose the increase that Chairman Clyde B. Aitcheson declared "it will be impossible to hear 500 people" on the temporary 10 per cent question. He then asked if there were any supporters of the railroads' petition besides the roads themselves. Receiving no response, he called J. H. Parmelee, statistical expert of the Association of American Railroads, as the first witness for the petitioners.

Parmelee told the commission the carriers were in prospect of operating "in the red" next year unless freight rates were adjusted above the 17 per cent increase granted last January. He offered vidence that 34,933 miles of railroad properties are now in bankruptcy proceedings and that 29 carriers lost money last year "in spite of a record-breaking volume of peacetime business."

Dakota Judge Admits Taking Stolen Funds

By The Associated Press

A sworn statement by a convicted embezzler that $12,000 had been paid to W. A. Jacobson, a North Dakota State district judge, to hire attorneys for him, was denied in part yesterday in an affidavit from Jacobson before Senate investigations.

J. L. Robertson, deputy Comptroller of the Currency, told a Senate Civil Service Subcommittee that R. G. Rasmusson, former vice president of the First National Bank in Williston, N. Dak., now serving a 15-year term for embezzlement, stated he had paid the $12,000 to Jacobson from embezzled funds.

Rasmusson pleaded guilty in October, 1946, to embezzlement of $235,948 of bank funds. The cashier, Marvin A. Thorson, was sentenced to 3 years. Two other employes were placed on probation.

Graham Morrison, assistant Attorney General, later testified that the FBI has an affidavit from Jacobson in which he said he had received only $5000 and knew nothing of the other $7000.

"Holding $4000 in Trust"

Morrison said that Jacobson's affidavit stated that of the $5000 he received, $4000 was held in trust by him to be paid at the proper time to John Rohwedder, a Minneapolis attorney, and an associate, Kitty Doyle.

In addition Jacobson said he had personally used about $200 for his traveling expenses and had paid about $800 to Rohwedded and Doyle.

Morrison said Jacobson was expected home soon from Germany where he is serving on the staff prosecuting German war criminals.

Morrison did not have Jacobson's affidavit with him and recounted parts of it to the committee from memory.

He later told a reporter it could not now be made public. He also said that the FBI had no evidence to show that Jacobson had ever received more than $5000 from Rasmusson.

The hearing was called by Senator Langer (R. N. D.) to try to ascertain why shortages in the Williston Bank could continue for 12 years before and indictments were obtained. He said they occurred from 1934 to 1946 and totaled $373,000.

Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency, said the heaviest losses occurred during the war years when his staff of national bank examiners was shorthanded and "we had a heavy load for the personnel to handle."

Delano said that it is hard to determine what are "mistakes" and what are "criminal acts."

Deputy Comptroller Robertson said that National bank examiners do not engage in "the mechanical task of uncovering embezzlements."

Robertson said earlier discovery of the shortages could only have been detected by an audit of the bank, but this procedure is not used by the bank examiners.

It would require up to five times the present personnel to audit National banks, Robertson stated.

Tighter War Contract Laws Urged by GAO Chief Counsel

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A House investigating subcommittee yesterday heard renewed demands from the General Accounting Office for the tightening of laws governing war contracts and Government contracting officers.

Fisher

Representative George Bender (R., Ohio), subcommittee chairman, estimated that on the basis of preliminary GOA evidence it appeared that the Government may be prevented from recovering up to one half billion dollars in overpayments to war contractors.

E. L. Fisher, chief counsel of the General Accounting Office, said that the war contract termination act of 1944, provisions of the tax laws, and certain other legislation which prevented a GOA audit before settlement of war contract claims undoubtedly would cost the taxpayers millions of dollars.

Fisher admitted that a change in legislation now would be like locking the stable door after all but the tail of the horse had gone through, but he said, it would prevent misuses of public funds in the future.

Congressional Action Assailed

The matter, Fisher declared, had been thoroughly threshed out at the time Congress passed the legislation in question, but experience showed that Congress had made a mistake in surrendering the right watch dog of the Treasury, to scrutinize war contract settlements before they were made.

Three former directors of the Office of Contract Settlement last night angrily charged that Comptroller General Lindsay Warren is now attempting to show Congressional decision was wrong "by seeking to stretch alleged fraud by 19 contractors into the basis for an indictment of the program as a whole.

The three, Robert H. Hinckley, Roger L. Putnam, and H. Chapman Rose, said:

"Under the Contract Settlement Act, it is the responsibility of the Comptroller General to audit the settlements of terminated war contracts to detect fraud.

"For three years these audits have been going on. The Comptroller General now reports that he has referred to the Department of Justice the cases of 19 contractors, involving 79 termination settlements and possible fraudulent payments of $788,233.41 as distinguished from the figure of more than $2,009,000 mentioned in his report, the balance of which is made up of penalties and forfeitures to which fraud would subject these contractors."

In accordance with its usual practice the War Frauds Division, Department of Justice, had observers present at yesterday's hearing.

They heard an unusual tribute from GAO to Attorney General Tom Clark and the Justice Department.

"There has been the closest cooperation between the General Accounting Office and the Department of Justice and this has been particularly true from the time the present Attorney General first assumed his duties as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the CrGiminal Division," Fisher said.

Legislation Defended

The three former directors of the Office of Contract Settlement insisted that congressional legislation dealing with war contracts had been wise and sound.

Fisher told the committee that Congress had made a mistake in repealing an 1870 law forbidding Government contracting officers from taking employment with firms whose contracts they handled for the Government for two years after they left Government service.

Fisher said there had been too many instances of the "vicious" practice of military personnel "feathering nests" for themselves while dealing with war contractors on behalf of the Government.

Most of Fisher's testimony revolved about the settlement of 32 war contracts in which, he declared, the government overpaid contractors a total in excess of $1,121,695. Overpayments, he said, mgiht have been caused by honest errors rather than by fraud.

One firm, the American Ironing Machine Co., of Algonquin, Ill., has already voluntarily returned $3031 to the government, he stated, as soon as the error was called to its attention.

Bender said contracting officers would be asked what steps they had taken to collect the rest of the funds, and that if necessary individual contractors would also be called.

Army, Navy Chiefs Heard By Air Board

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's Air Policy Board has begun its study of the Nation's military and civil aviation needs in conferences with top aeronautics officials.

W. Stuart Symington, Assistant Secretary of War for Air and Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, John Nicholas Brown, outlined the air defense situation to the group behind closed doors yesterday. Symington will be Secretary of the new Department of Air Forces when unification becomes effective.

The board, headed by Thomas K. Finletter, also held a joint session with the Civil Aeronautics Board, and heard testimony from Garrison Norton, Assistant Secretary of State, and James E. Webb, Budget Bureau Director.

Hearings Next Week

Open hearings will start Monday. First subject to be studied will be the condition of the air transport industry. Admiral Emory S. Land, president of the Air Transport Association, will be the first witness.

Representatives of the aircraft manufacturing industry will be called beginning September 29. A major problem is the amount of financial support the Government should give the industry to guarantee American air leadership.

Meanwhile, a Senate-House committee prepared to launch its own study. The group will hold its organization meeting Monday.

Representative Kilday (D., Tex.), a member of the committee, indicated yesterday that the questions of research and development, and maintenance of an adequate aircraft industry, will be the most critical before them.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: "It is disconcerting to see practices prevail in the retail field which have irritated and provoked the public . . . The practices I refer to are: First, the sale of new cars at premium prices; second, unreasonably low allowances on trade-ins; third, insisting on a trade-in before a new car is delivered; fourth, loading of unneeded and unwanted accessories . . . We deplore such bad practices . . ." said J. R. Davis, vice president and director of sales and advertising of Ford Motor Co. in an address yesterday before Tennessee Automotive Association.

FALLACY CITED: Paul G. Hoffman, chairman of Committee for Economic Development, called upon business yesterday to combat a "dangerous notion—that a great depression in the early 50s is unavoidable." In a speech prepared for delivery to the Sales Executives Club of New York, Hoffman warned that Russia today was "eagerly awaiting signs of collapse" in America's economy, but he asserted that he believed "boom and busts" could not only be avoided but the fluctuations in economy can be held to "20 per cent, or perhaps 15 per cent." He recommended a "dynamic stability" as a basis for controlling fluctuation and in specifying necessary measures to attain this, he asked first recasting "our tax structure so that it tends to promote stability rather than instability, as it now does."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Record highs were established by September corn and September oats in today's grain futures trading at the Board of Trade. Seasonal highs were recorded in all deliveries.

September corn and oats broke through record highs established last week when that delivery of corn sold at 2.53½ against today's high of 2.60½. Last week September oats sold for a record high of 1.18⅝ against today's high of 1.21¼.

In the cash grain market former records were broken as yellow corn soared to 2.63¼ and white oats to 1.20½.

Gains in wheat ranged up to 10 cents, corn to 8 cents, oats to 6 cents, soybeans 8 cents and lard 2.00, the daily limits permitted under exchange rules.

At the finish wheat was 7⅝ to 10 cents higher than the previous close, September, 2.72½. Corn was 6¾ to 8 cents higher, September, 2.60¾@2.60½. Oats were 4¾ to 5¾ higher, September, 1.30¾@1.30⅝. Soybeans were 3 cents higher, November, 3.15½, and lard was 1.75 to 2.00 higher, September, 21.45.

The opening advance, brokers said, was the result of a trade report that "realistic" Government officials handling the export grain program "are resigned to 4.00 a bushel on wheat, probably by early next year." Some brokers called the report "fantastic" but the shorts rushed to cover and the buying wave was on.

Later, responsible authorities handling grains for the Agricultural Department told a reporter they "are not reconciled" to the possibility that wheat may reach 4.00 a bushel by early next year.

Vepco Found Guilty Under Smoke Law

Judge James R. Duncan of Alexandria Civil and Police Court yesterday found the Virginia Electric & Power Co. guilty of violating the city's smoke ordinance.

Duncan withheld sentence until Friday, when he will hear testimoney from an engineer of the State Corporation Commission as to Vepco's efforts to correct the nuisance.

Criminal Action

City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast brought criminal action against the company August 14 charging that the local plant allowed cinders and dense smoke to be emitted from its stacks in violation of the ordinance.

Vepco admitted creating the nuisance, but pleaded innocent on the ground that it was doing everything possible to elminate the condition. Vice President J. W. Howard said five dust collectors have been on order for a year. Two have just been installed, and the rest are on the way, he said.

Howard and other witnesses told the court that the chief cause of the smoke is a necessary overloading of the plant's facilities. They also pointed out that shortages of materials has prevented earlier compliance with the law.

Residents in the vicinity of the waterfront power plant told of the difficulty of keeping houses, grounds and bodies clean with the smoke pouring in on every east wind.

Smoke Control Engineer John J. Kelley said that from the cinders collected by one of the installed collectors on a test run, he would estimate the plant distributes 10 to 12 tons of grit over the countryside daily.

Friday, Duncan will take testimony from George L. Bascome, an engineer appointed last month by the State Corporation Commission to make periodic checks of Vepco's efforts to expedite installation of the dust collectors.

WINTER'S A LONG TRIP

FILL-ER UP!

You wouldn't start a long trip with only two gallons of gasoline. Nor would you start a long, hard winter with only a few weeks' supply of coal. In both cases, it's wise at the start to say "Fill 'er up!"

There's no time like the present for getting ready for that long, hard winter ahead. A binful of coal — of Fuel Satisfaction — in your basement now will take the cares of winter ahead off your mind, and make the path an easier one when snow flies and the winds howl.

So call your coal dealer today, and you'll avoid the last-minute, "Johnny-Order-Lately" rush. Order now — say "Fill 'er up!" — and bid yourself "Happy Wintering!"

Fuel Satisfaction is the smart choice of millions who heat with coal. Fuel Satisfaction is the superior, all-purpose Bituminous Coal mined along the Norfolk and Western.

mated loss to the boat alone at $600,000 which he said was "pretty well covered" by insurance.

In Cincinnati, F. S. Christmas, assistant director of operations of the United States Corps of Engineers of the Ohio River Division, said he was advised by the engineers' Pittsburgh office that a boiler had exploded on the steamer.

Crewmen were hurled into the air, dropping more than 30 feet away into the river, by the force of the blast.

A fireman who probed the blackened wreckage after the oil and gasoline-fed flames were extinguished reported at least 28 blackened bodies still aboard. Firemen began to remove them, wrapped in canvas.

The charred and blackened hulk of the once-proud steamer sank in the Monongahela River after burning for two hours.

Shenandoah Fossils Studied For Data About Trilobites

Back about 500 million years ago there was a thing called a trilobite which was the dominant creature on earth.

The trilobite stuck around for about 100 million years before it became extinct, for reasons unknown to science. Trilobites lived, among other places, in what is now the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, and the Smithsonian Institute is busy piecing out details of the life of the trilobite from rocks collected in the valley.

Dr. E. V. Whittington, paleontologist of the University of Birmingham, England, is among scientists working on this project. Yesterday the Smithsonian Institute announced some of the habits of the trilobite so far uncovered.

The trilobite, which first appeared in the Cambrian geological period, lived in enormous numbers, and was fro mbaout ant-size to more than 18 inches long.

The creatures shed their shells, which were in separate segments, and their underskins, from 10 to 12 miles during their lifetimes. Because of the peculiar shell arrangement, the animal could roll itself up into a ball for protection.

With Mary Harris

GYPSY MARKOFF, undoubtedly the world's most beautiful accordinist, (she plays good, too) will head the Balalaika's fall opening revue tomorrow night. It's her first Washington nitery appearance since before that Clipper crash at Lisborn which left her up to her pretty ears in plaster casts. Other new faces will be those of Gavrela, "flaming dagger dancer," and Olga, Slavic prima donna. Vanya, splendid Don Cossack dancer, is back. Also those perennial Balalaika favorites, Lola Lolik and dancers Yourloff and Yoder . . . La Markoff will remain for a month, be replaced by another star attraction under the new policy of owner-impresario Mischa Bessoff.

The Old New Orleans, all happified over the elegant crowds attracted by Bob Simpson's music, is planning something in the way of floor shows—probably one or two top-bracket acts.

JITTERSTEP CHAMPS. Homer and Holly, youngsters whose jitterbugging approaches a cataclysm, head the Lotus show opening tomorrow. Other stars will be Ted Lester, "traveling salesman of music," and ballroom dancers Mara and Maurice . . . Lotus will probably stage a fancy fall opening party late in September.

LA CONGA, handsome spot on the road to Baltimore, is being remodeled, improved and fixed up something terrific. It will be reopened on Friday, September 19, with the Harbert Curbelos band, now at New York's China Doll, playing for dancing and the Jessie Mack Trio (all pretty girls) doing the lulls . . . Owner Milt Barrett, determined to be kind to his customers, says that highballs will be only fifty cents and that he's going to serve a wonderful Atlantic City style seafood dinner for $1.50.

Georgia and Jerry, prize diversion pair of prewar Washington, will return to the Anchor Room on Thursday, September 11. They've just returned from Saratoga where they accumulated almost as many followers as the ponies.

KING COLE CORRESPONDENCE. Dona Mason returned to the King Cole Room ahead of that postcard she sent from Mexico saying, "Hasn't rained since I've been here. Isn't that wonderful!" (Think of the poor, swearing farmers, Dona.) . . . Comes, too, a sweet note from Marian Kingsley who sung while Dona vacationed. It's written in pink ink on black paper.

A BEAUTEOUS RESTAURATEUSE is youthful Mrs. Helene Karambelas who is operating the luxurious Muses, founded by her late husband, J. K. Karambelas. Besides being lovely to look at in the magnolia skinned, black-haired way, she dresses exquisitely, is a keen and industrious businesswoman. In many ways her situation parallels that of Helen Hamilton who took over the Troika as a young widow, then went on to make the place internationally noted during the war years.

When Sacha Lucas returns from Saranac Inn where he's been leading his band this summer, he'll make ready to open at the Brown Derby on October 2. Sacha and his violin will be featured with a piano, should draw music lovers from miles around.

LINGUISTIC TANGLEMENT. "Mayor" Ciro of Ciro's, as a native of Naples, giggles when anyone quotes "See Naples and die." It seems that the Italian "mari," meaning die, is also the name of a little town near Naples. The original sentence, before being sentimentalized by translators who didn't know too much about Naples, says the Mayor, was simply "See Naples and Mari."

MANHATTAN AND CHOW MEIN. Every restaurant has its prize customers, but at Ruby Foo's they like to recall a technical expert loaned the Government for the war period. During the three years this gent was in Washington he dined six nights a week at Ruby Foo's. He also had five Manhattans with every dinner, four on his own hook and one on the house.

"Tiny" Kaye, the big and bouncey lass who hasn't been in Washington since those big nights at Paul Young's, will open at the Windsor Room tonight.

SLICK LISTENING. Val (Vinny) Vincent's Trio at the Hi Hat are piling up a following of sweet music fans. Val leads from the electric guitar. George Garrity plays a fast piano and Tony's sleek violin ties the melody together . . . Bob Knight's Lounge Riviera band has a special and nice way of handling "Smoke, Smoke, Smoke." (Riviera was one of the not-too-many places in town that had a good August) . . . L'il Maurita Gordon of the Uptown cocktail lounge can give a delicate touch to Debussy or roll out a boiling mess of jive. It's piano as the customers desire it . . . It's wonderful!—the way the rhythm sizzles when Clint Hobbes and his crew at the Nightingale start to "ride." Hot music will never be passe while boys like them are around . . . Pretty Edith Davies of the Neptune Room does some of her trickiest organing in "Satan Takes a Holiday" . . . For satiny and engaging dance music there's no one around to top Oscar Davis and his Pall Room orchestra.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

GOP Chiefs Want Hughes on Mat Again

By Drew Pearson

Last word has not been heard of the Senate probe of Howard Hughes, the Hollywood plane builder and chief owner of Trans World Airlines.

Hughes

Inside fact is that Senator Vandenberg of Michigan and other GOP Senate chiefs have demanded that Senator Brewster call Hughes back to Washington for another going-over. Republican leaders say that the way the probe backfired in Brewster's face was very bad politics and left a sour taste in the public's mouth. They want this taste removed.

Brewster has assured Vandenberg and the others that a rehearing will be held as soon as his sidekick, Senator Ferguson of Michigan, returns from a European trip in November. To this end, committee sleuths are doing their best to dig up more dirt to throw at Hughes when the gong sounds for round two.

Note—Meanwhile Democratic leaders have not been idle. They are quietly working on evidence that Senator Brewster was linked with Pan American Airways, rival to Hughes' Trans World Airways. If their evidence shapes up, they will move for Brewster's impeachment.

Inside Russia

While it's difficult to know exactly what's going on inside Russia, one significant fact is that Stalin is not making the same mistake Hitler did of trusting his generals. The Russian general staff has now been thoroughly dispersed.

While Hitler broke up trade unions and disrupted private business, he kept the German general staff intact. Eventually this proved his undoing. For about the time the Allies invaded France, the general staff turned against him and in July, 1944, almost assassinated him.

The Russian dictatorship, however, has made sure that generals who get too powerful are shifted to distant posts or liquidated. The execution of seven high Russian generals before the war is the most extreme illustration of how the Kremlin treats military leaders it does not trust. A milder form has been the transfer of Marshal Zhukov, hero of Berlin, to the relatively obscure command of Odessa.

Reliable intelligence reports from Moscow indicate that the Politburo is determined to take no chances with a strong Russian general staff.

Presidential-stumping Bob Taft got off to a bad start with Western voters when he tripped over that old political stumbling block, the Colorado River. Innocently, Bob scheduled a two-day air inspection trip of Colorado River projects—under the auspices of THE COLORADO RIVER BOARD OF CALIFORNIA. This is a State agency dominated largely by wealthy growers.

Nothing could have made neighboring Western States more indignant, for they regard California as a neighborhood bully whose greater size gives her a loud voice in interstate affairs. To provide water for her growing population and thirsty farmlands, they claim, California has helped herself lavishly from the all-important Colorado—at the expense of other Western States.

Credit for this political boner goes to California Senator Bill Knowland, long jealous of the dominant role his Democratic colleague, Sheridan Downey, has played in pushing California's water ambitions. To offset it, Knowland arranged for his friend Senator Taft to travel under the aegis of California in visiting the Colorado River.

Too late, Taft's office realized the mistake. They hope to smooth it over by suggesting that the Arizona board go along, and De Witt Sage, who helped plan Taft's tour, is on his way to California to urge this compromise.

Maddest of all over the Taft boner is the famous novelist, Arizona's State GOP chairman, Clarence Buddington Kelland, former Republican publicity mogul and an important leader among Western Republicans.

Note: Despite the fact that Taft and Republican Senators passed a special act of Congress changing the name of Boulder Dam to Hoover Dam, Taft's press release made the glaring mistake of stating that he would inspect the "Boulder Dam area."

British Gold (Horse) Trading

Foreign Minister Bevin's proposal that the U. S. A. give England back some of our gold has only made U. S. monetary officials mad. They recall the fact that the British have a habit of selling us a commodity once, then taking it back and selling it to us again—as for instance with empire preference.

In the case of gold, some people may not realize that most of the gold we buy comes from the British—chiefly South Africa. If we quit buying gold, British gold mines would really be out of luck. But having sold us the gold, the British now want it back, which means, of course, they would sell it to us a second time. For we are one of the few countries where they can exchange goods for gold today.

Selling us the same commodity over and over again was what happened with empire preference. On three different occasions the United States in effect bribed the British to abolish empire preference (the system whereby England gives other members of the British Empire lower tariff rates than the rest of the world.) Here is the history of what happened:

1. We paid $26 billion dollars in lend-lease to England with the provision that empire preference be abolished.

2. When the British said they could not live up to this, we paid them another $3,700,000,000 through the so-called British "loan"— again on condition they abolish empire preference.

3. At the Geneva Trade Conference the British have told us they cannot live up to prior agreements and empire preference must be restored.

4. Finally the British plan to have us buy back the abolition of empire preference again when we give them more funds under the Marshall Plan.

Merry-Go-Round

J. Edgar Hoover has assigned several hundred G-Men to track down conspiracies to raise the price of food, clothing and housing. Already the FBI has found that some industry representatives have been keeping deliberately false minutes of their meetings to cover up secret price fixing . . . the State Department has received word that the "bad boy of Moscow," Foreign Minister Molotov will head the USSR delegation to the United Nations. As a result, Secretary Marshall has decided to head the USA delegation at the United Nations. This means another knockdown, drag-out fight in New York—beginning next week.

Armstrong Given A 'Paleface' Role

Hollywood.—Twentieth anniversary of his motion picture debut was celebrated last week by Robert Armstrong coincident with his signing for an important role in Paramount's big-scale Technicolor film, "The Paleface," starring Bob Hope and Jane Russell.

Just 20 years ago Armstrong appeared in Pathe's "The Main Event," signalizing start of his successful screen career. Since that time he has appeared in 107 pictures.

In "The Paleface," Armstrong will play the role of Terris, a suave killer and renegade lieutenant of a gang engaged in smuggling guns and ammunition to the Indians.

The Vice of the Turtle

That Naughty Comedy Returns

By Richard L. Coe

(Reprinted from yesterday's final edition)

CYRIL RITCHARD, who played the scandalous Tattle in Gielgud's "Love for Love," told us that "The Voice of the Turtle" had shocked the wits out of him.

Since then the John van Druten comedy has had a strikingly brief London run with Margaret Sullavan in the role she created four years ago this autumn. Like Ritchard, the Britishers were scandalized by this story of a young girl's weekend with a wartime soldier.

All this was very much on our mind last night at the National, where Haila Stoddard opened a 10-performance run as the starry-eyed lass from Missouri, who at 23 or thereabouts has lived the rich full life and not known it.

It is, to be sure, a bit late to be pointing out that the skillful van Druten has written a very naughty play—naughty at least in the sense of the morality on which we try to believe our social order is built. For the unmarried Sally Middleton not only admits to having enjoyed what our divorce courts call "intimate relations," but she does so in the course of the weekend we watch before Stewart Chaney's clever setting.

The trick, of course, lies in the author's shrewd characterization of his heroine as a naive child who simply can't bear to let the telephone ring for fear of hurting its feelings. Sally, you remember, is ingenuous and sweet and the things she has to say are always endearing. The fact remains Sally sleeps with her soldier, just as she has with several gentlemen before him. And to further point up his heroine's naivete, van Druten's only other woman is a frankly predatory female, the antithesis of Sally. So the audience thinks "Dear Sally, isn't she sweet?"

The London Reviews

And it is late, too, to be pointing out again the differences between us and our English-speaking cousins. From the London reviews, one gleans that the Britishers do not resent Sally's behavior per se; what was objected to was her consistent ability to excuse her erring ways by the very sweetness and light with which van Druten arrayed his heroine.

In other words, the British view —"Who are they trying to kid?"— seems to stem from an essential moral difference in the two countries. As we all know from the plays of Shakespeare and the Restoration through those of Wilde, Lonsdale and Maugham fleshly adventures decidedly have their place of honor on the British stage. But saying one thing and meaning quite another is viewed, curiously if you wish, as not cricket.

Is this, then, an American trait? Why is it that the New York company will soon have its fourth birthday and that there have been as many as three companies touring the States? Quite apart from the entertainment value of the play (which is enormous), can it be that we enjoy kidding ourselves? Or is it that we are not exactly perceptive enough to know the enormity of van Druten's joke? Whatever, the comedy has had successful runs in Boston, where the censors are notoriously strict. Had they tampered with the comedy at all, there would have been no play left.

Wire the Electrician!

As to the National's present company, it is certainly hampered by an electrician for whose sins of omission we recommend he be tied to the nearest 50,000-watt voltage and left to cook. One gaffe an opening night is permissible, but not several. By tonight, for the benefit of the acting trio, we trust he will be alert for his cues.

Miss Stoddard's evidently innate naivete is fine for Sally, but her performance is still uneven. In some scenes, as in the beginning of the second act, she is just right. In others she tries too hard. Sooner or later so coyly cute a creature would make Sergt. Bill Page forget those marriage vows he suggests, at the end of the play, he will take. But then, perhaps, that too is the point of Van Druten's joke?

Philip Faversham is the sergeant, a more boyish-looking chap than the role's creator, Elliott Nugent. Personally, however, we never hold youth—or the looks of youth—against anyone. His Bill Page is not an incisive man, but he makes him ingratiating, certainly an important facet of Bill's personality. Shelia Bromley, as it must have been said about all actresses who play the man-crazy Olive, completes the cast, hard, worldly and honest.

While it is not, then, a brilliant cast and while such wartime shenanigans have a period air about them, those who were seeing the comedy for the first time last night obviously were enjoying it. For van Druten is certainly one of our few brilliant writers of dialogue today and his neat, exact lines are an audience's joy. His acute ear has caught the way people talk, which is more than can be said for most of our playwrights and scriptwriters.

And speaking of scriptwriters, what sort of a job do you suppose the forthcoming movie of this one will be like? Well scrubbed, no doubt.

So if you've not seen "The Voice of the Turtle," you'd better catch its untouched, though hardly pristine, shape at the National. And if you have, stick to your memories.

FAMILIAR TITLE, NEW NAME: Who could these be but Irene Dunne and William Powell, who arrive tomorrow in the long-awaited film version of "Life With Father." The new name stems from the theater which will house Warners' top bid of the season, aptly the Warner, which today, for the last time, will be officially "The Earle"

Miss Durbin and O'Connor, 'White House Girl,' Team

Hollywood, Sept. 9. — Deanna Durbin and Donald O'Connor, teamed in "Something in the Wind," will be together again in "White House Girl." He dances —and how! she sings. Karl Tunberg, the producer, is in Washington digging up background material. He'll bring an actual Washington switchboard operator out here to teach Deanna how to operate for her role in the film. The more I see of Donald O'Connor, the better I like him. He's loaded with talent. . . . Gloria Henry, who was Gene Autry's leading lady in 'Strawberry Roan," gets the lead opposite Glenn Ford in "Return of October," and I hear that Harry Cohn will personally produce the picture. . . . Dick Haymes will be mighty busy this month. He resumes his radio show and starts "Up in Central Park," and Mrs. Haymes expects a new baby—all within two weeks. . . . Burt Lancaster joins Eddie Robinson in 'All My Sons," the play that our Army thought too communistic to be sent abroad.

Deanna Durbin

Perils of Pauline

Betty Hutton, whose next picture has been shelved until after the birth of her baby next April, said: 'You know, Hedda, I'm a lucky girl to be married to a business man instead of an actor. Ted is loaded, and we don't have to worry while I'm on suspension." Betty told her studio about the expected stork's visit as soon as she knew, as she thought it unfair to wait until the picture was ready to shoot. . . . A prominent producer-director is sitting on a keg of dynamite and doesn't know which way to jump. In any direction, it will be from out of the frying pan into the fire. If the story breaks, it'll rock the town like the Charlie Chaplin-Joan Berry affair did.

Credit Where Due

Elizabeth Ptterson, who was in "Angel Street" at La Jolla, tells me Laraine Day gave one of the finest performances that she's ever seen in that play. . . . Cole Porter called to say goodby. He's flown east to be with his wife, Linda, who is out of the hospital, but still in great pain. . . . Lana Turner hasn't moved into Ty Power's house, as reported. She's merely supervising the redecoration of it during Ty's absence.

Took a Beaton

Some months ago, a fashion magazine featured several photografs of Greta Garbo taken by Cecil Beaton. A friend of Garbo's told the actress she didn't think the pictures were very good. 'Twas then Greta explained: "You see I had them taken because I wanted a picture for my passport." When Beaton heard that, he hit the sky . . . Nicholas Joy, who played in "The Iceman Cometh" on Broadway, goes into "Joan of Lorraine" as the archbishop of Rheims . . . Enterprise is still trying to convince Charles Boyer that he was born to play the lead in "Proud Destiny" . . . Cedric Hardwicke has gone to New York to direct J. B. Priestly's play; "An Inspector Called" . . . The people who live around the Metropolitan airport got quite a shock the other day when they saw six parachuters floating down from a plane. They wondered what kind of an invasion it was; then learned it was Frank Capra and Art Black doing scenes for "State of the Union."

Composer, 17, To Represent D. C. in Contest

Ronald K. Arnatt 17, wants to be a composer.

With most 17-year-olds that would be about as far as it would have gotten. But Arnatt began studying piano when re was six, learned the organ when he was 13, the French horn wheen he was 15, and is already hard at work at his chosen profession.

Yesterday, it began to pay off. He played one of his own compositions, "Rhapsody on the Malvern Hills," for the local competition for the Carnegie Hall musical scholarship, and came out Washington representative in the contest. Finalist will be determined by a group of national judges including Rise Stevens and Ezio Pinza of the Metropolitan Opera, and Boris Morros, producer of the movie, "Carnegie Hall."

The Washington competition was decided yesterday in auditions at radio station WMAL. Transcriptions will be used by the national judges in their final selection. Other local artists who competed with Arnatt were Earl Donoho, 17, of 4541 South Chelsea lane, Bethesda, Md.; Phyllis Hoyland, 1277 Brentwood rd. ne., and William Groff, 10116 Hereford pl., Silver Spring, Md.

Arnatt, who lives at 1607 Brentwood rd. ne., is an American by adoption. He was born in England and came here about three months ago with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Arnatt, to join his sister, Mrs. Randall M. Gardner.

Arnatt has filed for citizenship papers. If he wins the Carnegie Hall scholarship, he hopes to study composition at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia.

Airport Drive-In Opens 'Officially'

Tonight sees the official opening of the latest drive-in auto theater in the capital area—the Airport on route 1, one mile from the 14th street bridge.

Though the theater has been "unofficially" open for some nights now, tonight's is to be the big blow-off, with Arlington County officials heading a guest-of-the-management list. The film tonight is "Dragonwyck," starring Gene Tierney.

Paul J. Foley, Washington lawyer, is owner of the theater, which, he claims, is nearer to a city than any similar outfit in the country. Individual car speakers of the latest design are a feature. The area accommodates 1200 cars.

Lawford Learns Underwater Hug

Hollywood. — For Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new Technicolor musical, "Good News," Peter Lawford learned dance crazes of the roaring '20's. Now he is learning, he says, to imitate a goldfish in his role opposite Esther Williams in "On an Island With You."

In one sequence Miss Williams pushes Peter, fully dressed, into a swimming pool. He sinks, folds his arms, and waits, knowing she will follow.

She does, and they embrace in a damp reconcilation recorded by the underwater cameras.

"I'd never stayed under water for two minutes before," said Lawford, "but it was certainly a good time to learn!"

Prince Georges Authorizes Voting Registration Revision

Modernization of the election registration records of Prince Georges County, Md., at a cost of approximately $12,000 was authorized yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

Members of the Board of Election Supervisors, Alexander L. Buscher, chairman; John S. Underwood and Samuel A. Wyvill, appeared before the commissioners to request the change from the present cumbersome hand-written books to a new loose leaf card index system similar to that used in Anne Arundel and Montgomery Counties.

The present system is inadequate to handle the 49,000 voters on the lists, the election board declared, and the new system will result in a saving through simplification of recording and filing the voting registrations.

It is expected that the new registration books will be ready for use in the presidential elections next year, Wyvill said.

The county commissioners received formal declaration from Mrs. Helen T. Powell, mother and executor of the estate of Richard H. Powell, jr., of Mt. Rainier, who was drowned in the Kaywood Gardens culvert July 1 that she intends filing claim for damages.

The commissioners received a letter from Melda H. Henry, chairman of the health and safety committee of the J. Enos Ray School near Takoma Park, requesting them to take measures to protect children attending the school from traffic hazards. The association asked erection of a traffic light at New Hampshire ave. and Ray rd. and construction of a sidewalk on New Hampshire ave.

The board directed Linden Briscoe, clerk to the board, to discuss the matter with County Engineer Arthur Tayman and ask Tayman to bring the request to the attention of the Advisory Board.

Bids were opened on construction of a bridge on Calvert rd. over Northwest branch but the commissioners decided the bids were too high and ordered new bids, to be opened September 23. Yesterday's five bids ranged from $94,320 to $152,463.

Says John Law:

No One Here Complains Of Lotteries

The odds against getting arrested for conducting an honest raffle in the District are apparently greater than the odds against winning one of those new cars being chanced off.

And who's complaining?

No one, says local law enforcement heads.

Virginia's Governor Tuck poked a stick at the turtle's head on Monday when he proclaimed that raffles for whatever cause are in violation of Virginia law and punishable by fine and imprisonment.

He's still waiting to see if he picked a snapper.

District Comment Guarded

District heads, however, were drawn in at the mere echo of his gesture. Some emerged enough yesterday to express guarded and I-swore-to-my-oath-of-office comment.

Said Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Police Vice Squad:

"Lotteries and raffles are illegal in the District. If I see or know of a play being made, I'll take action.

"However," he howevered, "before I seek a warrant in such cases, I have been instructed to confer with the United States Attorney's Office."

Barrett's Comment Ditto

Said Police Chief Robert J. Barrett:

Ditto.

Said George Morris Fay, United States District Attorney for the District:

"The District Attorney's Office does not rule on a legal matter unless a formal complaint has been lodged."

As to the man-on-the-street, he's hoping the crusaders stick to more serious ideas. It's hard enough to get a new automobile these days.

Whole Blood Seen Replacing Plasma In Transfusions

New York, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—The Nation's top surgeons disclosed today that they are going to return to the old standard, whole blood, rather than plasma for use in transfusions.

One surgeon said that plasma, despite its wide use during the war, has "steadily lost ground to blood" in the field of treatment in surgery.

This surgeon, Dr. Dallas B. Phemister, Chicago, told the thirty-third clinical congress of American College of Surgeons that experience has shown that plasma should be used only when whole blood is not available.

Dr. Paul I. Hoxworth, Cincinnati, said plasma only "in a relatively few instances" is more desirable than whole blood. He said the problem of blood bank organization "adequate to meet the needs of every community is unsolved."

New Apartment Project Planned Near Bethesda

Proposed erection of a three-to-four-million-dollar, 100-unit apartment hotel on a 7 acre tract at River and Goldsboro rds., near Bethesda, Md., was disclosed yesterday at a zoning hearing before the Montgomery Commissioners.

The commissioners, who took under advisement the request for rezoning from residential A to commercial D, heard R. Bates Warren, builder, say the project would resemble the Kennedy Warren Apartments in appearance.

Episcopalians Talk Training

Leareds in Episcopal religious and educational fields joined yesterday in a conference on "Training of Women for Work in the Church."

Sessions are being held at the of Preachers, under sponsorship of the National Episcopal Council, New York City.

The Episcopal Church employs staff workers with both religious and secular training, and the purpose of the conference is to coordinate that institution. Most familiar church staff workers are the vested deaconesses, who visit homes of members, conduct social welfare work, frequently teach in Sunday schools.

The Rev. A. Ervine Swift, acting director of the National Episcopal Council's Foreign Missions Department, and leader of the conference here appointed last night following findings committee:

Dean Charles L. Taylor, of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., chairman; Bishop J. Long Jackson, Louisiana; Dr. Frederick C. Grant, Union Theological Seminary, New York City; Dr. Adelaide Case, Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge; and Mrs. Arthur Sherman, executive secretary, Episcopal Woman's Auxiliary.

Among churchmen attending the sessions are Bishops Angus Dun, of the Washington Diocese; Edwin J. Randall, sufragan of Chicago; Stephen F. Bayne, jr., and E. L. Dandridge, coadjutor of Diocese of Olympia, Washington, and Tennessee.

A FINER SERVICE FOR A FINER CAR

To users of Heating Oil...

2 Suggestions:

As you have probably heard, demand for petroleum products of all kinds is greater than ever before in peacetime or war. The oil industry's production is breaking all records. But scarcity of some materials is delaying construction of new facilities for refining and transportation. Some forecasters feel there may be some "spot shortages" of fuel oil this winter. So, believing that it is in the public interest, we suggest:

SUGGESTION NO. 1
Have your supplier fill your oil tank now . . .
This will get you "all set" for the first cold snap—and will enable your supplier in turn to refill his storage tanks, thus having more total oil stored in your area before winter.

SUGGESTION NO. 2
Let us send you this free booklet . . .
Titled "20 Ways to Save Money On Home Heating," it is a handy and useful booklet of proved steps you can take in your home to save oil and thus money without cutting down on your comfort. This is good practice any time. Write for your copy to Mr. C. A. Newland, St. Paul Place and Franklin Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland.

Pinch Hitter Belts 4-Run Homer to Beat Dodgers

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DENVER, Sept. 9.—At every mention of the All-America Conference, the National Football League people haul out their built-in smirk and today it's a bit smirkier, if possible. They are very well pleased at what has been happening to that upstart, the AAC.

POVICH

The fact is that the All-America did pull a horrible skull with their three-cornered deal of yesterday that wafted Glenn Dobbs off the Brooklyn club and sent him to Los Angeles. The involvement of Angelo Bertelli, who went to the Chicago Rockets in the trade and Bob Hoernschmeyer, who landed with Brooklyn, was minor. Dobbs is the big consideration.

If the AAC had wanted to play into the grasping hands of the National Football League, it couldn't have played it more unsmartly. It was a deal that threatens to kill off the Brooklyn franchise, or at least stagger it and leave the AAC with another broken club on its hands. It was an invitation to the NFL to sneer again, this time with good reason.

DOBBS WAS ALL that the Brooklyn club had going for it. Brooklyn was a weak team, with one of the smallest parks in the league and a poor preseason sale, and had lost $200,000 last year. But Brooklyn did have Dobbs, who is probably the best football player in either pro league. That much they couldn't take away from the Dodgers. Whatever season tickets were sold, stemmed from the Brooklyn fans' admiration for Dobbs.

There was no mention that money passed in the deal, but what do you think? The rich Los Angeles team says it gave up only the injured Bertelli in the deal. Apparently L. A. had the chance to grab Dobbs off, but if it had the interest of the league at heart it never would have made the deal. They strengthened themselves and left the already staggering Brooklyn club in foul shape.

The AAC got a black eye when Miami folded last year. A couple of more foldups and the league will be under dark suspicion. In this case, however, they brought it on themselves by the inability of the rich teams to resist the temptation to feed off the poor ones. I'd hate to be Brooklyn's public relations man this week.

AT THE SUGGESTION that the AAC is a big league, the National Football League people haul out a dozen reasons why it isn't. Right now they say they have pipe lines into the AAC stadiums and that the attendance figures being given out are padded, and the house papered and that the gate receipts will prove it. They have an espionage system, they say.

So at a time when the AAC ought to be concerned with keeping its noses clean, they pull a thing like the Dobbs deal and ask for further criticism. It would have been to the better interest of the AAC to leave Dobbs in Brooklyn, where he was the only drawing card, instead of emptying the Dodgers of their only claim to big-league stature.

In the National League, the Bears used to do the same sort of thing—grabbing off the stars or the draft rights of the weaker clubs until the league put a stop to it. The NFL was smart enough to see its mistakes, but the AAC is blundering along unforgivably.

THE AAC COULD GO WELL with smart direction. I think their football teams are as good and they have bigger stadiums than the NFL, with the opportunity to cash in on big gates if they work up the proper kind of attraction. They can't be kissed off, and the only thing that can lick them is themselves.

They have in Buddy Young and Dobbs the two football players who may be the most sensational of all. They have probably more total wealth among their club owners than the National League can show. They very wisely paid up the debts of the defunct Miami team last year and met all financial obligations. The new team, Baltimore, got off to a good start.

They were in a position to sneer right back at the National League and ultimately make them like it, but now they go and foul themselves up by permitting one of their rich clubs to rack up a Brooklyn team that needed help, not a kick in the pants.

Skins Badly Crippled for Tilt Tonight With Lions

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Sept. 9.—The Redskins are gathering their tattered forces for another attempt to win a football game tomorrow night—this time in a joust with the Detroit Lions who, for the first time in years, are favorites to beat the Washington team.

It's another exhibition game for the Denver Post's Charity Fund, and to be charitable with the Redskins it must be observed they're not in good shape.

Ten of their football players are limping on leg injuries or listing from shoulder hurts. Mostly they're souvenirs from the 20-7 licking from the Los Angeles Rams the other night.

And at a time when the Redskins are hurting, the Lions are feeling expansive with two notable reinforcements in their backfield. Most notable is Halfback Bill Dudley, who the National Football League's most valuable player with Pittsburgh last season.

Zimmerman at Quarterback

Along with Dudley in the Lions' backfield is newcomer Roy Zimmerman, the ex-Redskin, and tradee from the Philadelphia Eagles, who will quarterback the club.

Meanwhile, Coach Turk Edwards of the Redskins is trying to hunt up a couple of left halfbacks to replace the ankle-hurt Dick Todd, who isn't even with the club. Todd, useless to the club at this point, has been furloughed for a week to attend his ranch sales in Texas.

In lieu of Todd, the Redskins probably will start Dick Poillon at left halfback, with Eddie Saenz and Jim Gaffney in reserve. Saenz recentlf distinguished himself with a fancy catch of one of Sammy Baugh's passes for the only touchdown against the Rams.

Baugh will be in there, of course, but Edwards indicates he will use him sparingly in these preseason games, and young Jim Youell is expected ot shoulder most of the quarterbacking and passing. The game may also see Tommy Mont's debut in the quarterbacking job. He didn't play at Los Angeles, but his swollen elbow i sfast responding to treatment.

Three Guards Injured

But troubling Edwards more than his backfield problem, is the condition of his line. No fewer than three of his guards are suffering with leg injuries—Bill Ward, John Steber and Leo Nobile.

The Redskin bosses blame the weakness of the guards for the poor protection Sammy Baugh got on his passes against Los Angeles.

Edwards is developing an interchangeable defense in his line with both tackles and centers taking over the guard jobs. He may press three centers, Ki Aldrich, Doug Turley and Al DeMao into service on the same defensive unit.

DeMao has a badly sprained thumb, and worst of it is, it's on his ball-snapping hand . . . Jim Gillette, with a charley horse, may not see action at all and the same goes for Sal Rosato and Bob DeFruiter . . . The Redskins and Lions worked out on the same field at Denver University this afternoon, after being toasted at a Kiwanis luncheon . . . A year ago, the Redskins were hot in Denver, beating the Green Bay Packers . . . Bill Dudley is unperturbed by the fact that he has joined a T-formation team in the Lions after playing the single wing for years with the Steelers . . . He says he played the T at the University of Virginia, and likes it best.

Aberson's 8th-Inning Blow Gives Cubs 4-3 Win

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Pinch-hitter Cliff Aberson clouted a homer with the bases loaded in the eighth inning today to enable the Chicago Cubs to come from behind and defeat the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers, 4-3.

The loss cut the Dodgers margin over the St. Louis Cardinals to five games. The Cards play Philadelphia in St. Louis tonight.

The big blow was hit off little Vic Lombardi who had stopped the Cubs cold with one hit through the first seven innings and who hadn't given up a safety through a span of 6 2/3 innings.

Brooklyn had taken the lead on Lefty Johnny Schmitz, who received credit for the victory, by scoring two runs in the first inning without hitting a ball out of the infield and another in the second.

Bob Scheffing opened the eighth with a single to left—the first hit off the Dodger southpaw since Eddie Waitkus doubled with one away in the first inning—and Bill Nicholson followed with a single to right, Scheffing holding up at second. Pee WeeReese, who had lcollected three singles for Brooklyn, then fumbled Ray Mack's double play grounder for an error to load the sacks.

Lombardi fanned Pinchhitter Clyde McCullough but Aberson, batting for Schmitz, smacked his homer into left field for the ball game. It was his second of the year.

The contest opened Brooklyn's final invasion of the West. They meet the Cubs twice more and then fact the Cards in a three-game series at St. Louis starting Thursday night.

Lopat Hurls 6-1 Victory Over Nats

Lefty Ed Lopat pitched the Chicago White Sox to a 6-1 victory over the Washington Senators at Griffith Stadium last night.

The victory was Chicago's fourteenth this season over the Nats against seven Washington wins.

Gerry Priddy started the Sox toward a 4-0 lead with one out in the second inning. Priddy saw Dave Philley's hot bouncer slide through his legs for an error and Cary helped the Sox along by walking Appling.

Third Baseman Floyd Baker drove in the first run with a double to center, scoring Philley. Tresh's single sent Appling across and then Lopat put in a big wallop in his own behalf.

After Tresh's theft of second, tow-headed Ed cleared everybody but himself from the base paths with another double to center, scoring Baker and Tresh.

Three Chicago hits in the fourth made it 6-0. This time Kennedy delivered the telling blow, a double against the left field fence after singles by Lopat and Kolloway. That was Cary's last inning and Candini was considered a medium-sized success when he issued a single infield hit in the fifth.

An inning later Milo, too, was in trouble. For the third time during the game, one man was out when the Sox threatened, Kolloway singling through second and moving to third as Sullivan committed a two-base error on Kennedy's grounder.

Wright was intentionally passed, filling the bases, but at that point Rudy York crossed up the strategy by fanning. Candini ended the grounder and throwing him out.

Finally, after the seventh-inning stretch, the Nats worked up a run. Vernon and Spence opened with singles and Priddy flied out to right, Vernon scoring from third. When Sullivan was walked and Ferrell got on through Kolloway's second error it looked like a big inning was coming.

But Early Wynn, batting for Candini, went down swinging. Yost was no more helpful in the pinch, lofting an easy out to center. It was a lost cause from then on.

Assault Okayed For Armed Race

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Robert J. Kleberg, jr., owner of the vast King Ranch of Texas, today agreed to run his 4-year-old horse, Assault, in the much-talked-of $100,000 match race against Armed at Belmont Park September 27.

George D. Widener, Belmont president, announcing Kleberg's formal acceptance, said he had no definite word yet from Owner Warren Wright or Trainers Ben and Jimmy Jones concerning Armed and his intentions of meeting the Texas-bred star in the mile-and-a-quarter test, which was originally set for Washington Park in Chicago August 30, but had to be called off because of an injury to Assault's foot.

Jones Homers, Bosox Beat Tigers, 5 to 3

Boston, Sept. 9 (AP).—Aided by Jake Jones' seventeenth homer, a three-run blast high into the left field screen, and by Fireman Johnny Murphy, who doused a threatening Detroit uprising inthe ninth, Joe Dobson, won his sixteenth game today as the Red Sox defeated the Tigers, 5-3.

The victory gave the Sox a one and a half game margin over the Tigers in their battle for second place. The Bostonians now have a season's edge over the Bengals with 12 victories against nine defeats and one game to be played tomorrow.

McAndrews' New Car Ready for Midget Races

Shorty McAndrews, the former Ford V-8 pilot from Allentown, Pa., will introduce a powerful new Offenhauser car into competition Friday night when he returns to the seven-event midget auto racing competition at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway at 8:30 o'clock.

McAndrews, a former stunt driver and successful operator of both big and little machines, has raced this Offy on dirt tracks previously, but is making adjustments that will enable it to compete on asphalt surfaced ovals for the remainder of the season.

Mayo Beaned In Bosox Game

Amateur Favorites Advance

Goodman, Chapman, Stranahan Advance

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 9 (AP).—Defending champion, ex-champions and the favorite bounced through the second round of the United States Amateur golf tournament today, practically without mussing their hair.

Defending Titleholder Ted Bishop of Dedham, Mass., made it the easy way—by default. After drawing a first round bye, Bishop checked in at the first tee today an eager beaver to match wallops. His opponent, Henry Kersaw of Pheonix, Ariz., couldn't play. He had broken his eye glasses, and immediate replacement was impossible.

Additional bad luck stalked the Arizona man. While trying to get new spectacles, somebody took the No. 1 wood club from his bag.

Former title winners Dick Chapman of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Johnny Goodman of Omaha wrapped up their second round titlts without difficulty.

Chapman, 1940 standard bearer, ousted James McAlvin, Lake Forest, Ill., 3 and 2. Goodman, the "dark horse" of 1929, who eliminated peerless Bobby Jones in the first round here 18 years ago and won the championship in 1937, took the second round measure of William Zieske, Minneapolis, 4 and 3.

Frank Strafaci of Flushing, N. Y., who captured the National Public Links title in 1935, also turned in a solid second round win. After a first round bye, Strafaci put out Tom Lambie, Phoenix, Ariz., 3 and 1.

The popular favorite, Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, sailed through his second round bout with subpar shooting, winning from L. B. Ribner, White Plains, N. Y., 6 and 4. Stranahan was two under par for the 14 holes he had to play over rugged Pebble Beach course.

He set a similar pace in yesterday's opening round and to date for 26 holes is four under par. The Ohioan had a 33 for today's first nine, three under.

The day's first resounding upset was turned in by Tom Leonard, jr., from Nashua, N. H., who beat the veteran star, Ray Billows, Poughkepesie, N. Y., 1 up.

Leonard, 29-year-old law student at the University of Virginia, was unawed by the fact his opponent had been national runner-up in 1937 and '39. He matched Billows with a par 36 for the first nine, then fired threes on the next three holes to grab and hold the lead until the end.

Twice former title holder Marvin "Bud" Ward of Spokane, Wash., put on the most sensational show of the round. He trounced Larry Bana, jr., of Bradford, Pa., 7 and 5 and played the 13 holes to win in five under par.

Col. Schriever Loses

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 9. Col. Ben S. Schriever, Washington D. C.'s only entrant in the National Amateur was defeated 4 and 2 by Robert Cardinal, Colma, Calif., in first round play concluded today.

Colonel Schriever's match with Cardinal was begun yesterday, halted on the thirteenth hole by darkness, and finished this morning.

Heurich Wins 2-0 Duel Off Spring Grove

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 9 (AP).—The Heurich Brewers of Washington, D. C., stayed in the fight for the All-American Amateur Baseball Championship tonight by turning aside Spring Grove, Md., in the first game of a twin bill, 2 to 0.

The victory for the Washington team halted Spring Grove's unbeaten streak and forced the two clubs to go back to Island Park for a second game that will decide this year's championship.

Washington had only one opportunity to score, but made the most of it. In the second inning Barnard Good connected for a double, the only extra base hit of the ball game. He scored on a single by Jack Castro, and Max Coe dropped a neat sacrifice to move Castro to second.

When Frank Brewer singled, Castro came home with the second and final run of the ball game.

Jack Lyons, 23-year-old right hander of the Washington club, held Spring Grove to four scattered hits and was never in danger.

Quantico Wins Eastern Title

Norfolk, Sept. 8.—The Quantico Marines added the Navy's East Coast championship to their baseball laurels here today as they defeated Camp Lejeune, 2-1. Bill Kohler, who pitched a four-hitter for Quantico, was credited with his twentieth victory against three losses.

Pete Peiritsch led the winners' attack with three hits, driving in the winning run in the first inning. Quantico, which previously won the Middle Eastern Service Conference and Potomac River Naval Command titles, now has a 61-23 record, 55 of the victories coming in the last 64 games. By winning today, Quantico qualified for the All-Navy championship series, which will take place later this month at a sight to be decided next week.

Pannell Tops Bowling List

Metropolitan Washington's number one duckpin bowler for the 1946-47 season is Cletus Pannell, ex-GI, and manager of the Rosslyn alleys.

Pannell was awarded the honor by the Washington City Duckpin Association's Ratings Committee.

Pannell won by a two-point margin in the balloting, 77-75, over Tony Santini of the Heurich Brewers.

Paul Perkins of Winn Motors, with 61 points, was third; Frank (Bub) Guethler of Galliher and Huguely, number one man for three seasons, was fourth. Pannell had a general average of 125-298 for 334 games, while Santini in 320 games had a 125-227 average.

Other rankings: Lou Jenkins, fifth; Hokie Smith, sixes; Lindsay Stott, seventh; Elmer "Moe" Meade, eighth; Joe Harrison, ninth, and Julie Singer, tenth. Honorable mention went to Billy Stalcup, Mike Avon and Joe Freschi.

The Men's Major District League will open its season tonight on eight different alleys.

Heurich Brewers will play Arcade Pontiac at Brookland, Galliher and Huguely will fcae Winchester Motors at Hi-Skor, Winn's Motors will meet Burr Heishmann at King Pin and Maple-Edge Pins will take on Mann's Potato Chips at Colonial Village.

Tigers Recall 17 From Minors

Detroit, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers today announced recall of 17 players from minor league clubs, including one—Outfielder Johnny Groth—who will report to the Bengals at Boston tomorrow. Groth batted .321 with the Tigers' Williamsport, Pa., farm club this season. Four other players may join the parent club shortly if their teams are knocked out in the play-offs in the International and Texas Leagues, respectively.

Arch Moore Fights Lytell In Garden Friday Night

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Twentieth Century Sporting Club announced today it had signed Archie Moore, St. Louis light-heavyweight, as a substitute for Jake LaMotta in a 10-round bout against Bert Lytell, Oakland, Calif., middleweight, in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

LaMotta was forced yesterday to withdraw from the fight with the California southpaw because of injured hands. Moore stopped Jimmy Bivins last night in Baltimore—and fell flat on his face immediately after he had been announced as the winner.

Phil Fox Has His Roosevelt Team Singing

He's Building Boys' Morale

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE NEIGHBORS haven't complained yet. But if the music from the Roosevelt High School stadium gets too loud, they can lodge their objections with Mr. Philip Fox.

Fox is the gent who was acclaimed as the high school coach of the year in 1946 because of the work he did on a downtrodden Roosevelt football team that hadn't won a game in nearly three years.

As a lieutenant in the wartime Navy, Fox learned much about coping with morale problems; he applied his experience accordingly, and sparked Roosevelt to three interhigh victories, more than it had won altogether in the previous five seasons.

HE'S STILL building morale, and getting his players to sing is his latest device. His players sing, "Hold That Tiger" as they hustle through their calisthenics, and in the shower room, its "Down by the Old Mill Stream."

* * * *

"Singing makes 'em happy. And if they're happy about practicing for football, I guess I can stand it, even if they're not Crosbys," grins Fox.

The coach is trying to make the team forget that Roosevelt has never won an interhigh championship. "One way has been to throw away the old uniforms," says Fox. "The whole team now has been outfitted in new white, orange and blue suits with shiny black helmets. For the first time, we'll look like big leaguers, and I hope we'll feel like big leaguers, too."

FOX'S TEAM will use a variation of the "T" formation, with which he promises lots of surprises for his interhigh opponents. There will be lots of surprises for the spectator students of the game, too, promises Fox.

"Because a few of our boys have shown certain weaknesses on offense or defense, it will not be unusual for us to have as many as five guards and six backs in the game at the same time. Several of our backs, who have worked well on the line in scrimmages, will be used as guards and tackles on defense."

Here's the way the Roosevelt team is shaping up:

Songs Make Them Happy on Field

Shear and Joe Rosenberg and newcomer Nick Chantiles will be the guards. All the guards and tackles over 200 except Shear who weighs 185.

In the backfield are Bernie Mead, Jerry Rothkin, Aris Bacas, Carl Ruble and Lou Sledge, all from last season. A newcomer is Vincent Pugliesi, who played for the powerful Gonzaga team last season. However, Pugliesi's eligibility is still in doubt.

Mead and Rothkin are the ace ball-toters; Rothkin and Bacas do most of the passing. Punting, heretofore a weak spot for Roosevelt, will be handled capably, Fox believes, by two youngsters fresh out of junior high school. They are Al Sterman and Joe Heischman.

Davis, Blanchard Will Clash on Grid

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 9 (AP).—Glenn Davis and Felix (Doc) Blanchard, West Point's famed backfield aces of last year, will face each other on opposing teams this fall.

Col. F. J. Schuck, Randolph Field public relations officer, today announced the Ramblers would meet the Fort Riley (Kans.) Army team here September 28.

Blanchard will play for Randolph Field and Davis for Fort Riley.

Schuck also announced that Randolph Field will meet Colegio Militar, the West Point of Mexico, here September 21.

Lieut. Arnold Tucker, a member of the West Point backfield with Davis and Blanchard last year, is an assistant coach of the Randolph Field eleven.

Mrs. Glick Rallies for Win on 17th

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9—The three favorites to win the Middle Atlantic Women's Golf Tournament at the Hermitage Country Club all came through with opening round victories today but two of them had to display their best form to do so.

Mrs. Maurice Glick, Baltimore city champion, who took medal honors yesterday with a one over par 78, met a keen competitor in Miss Jeanette Meyers, also of Baltimore, but finally won, 2 and 1, after being one down at the turn.

Mrs. Glick, who meets Mrs. M. A. Downey, still another Baltimorean, tomorrow, made a magnificent comeback and ended the match on the seventeenth by halving the hole. Mrs. Downey eliminated Mrs. Grayson Dashiell of the Country Club of Virginia today, 6 and 5.

Mrs. J. B. Cralle of Roanoke, the Old Dominion's No. 2 player, was hard pushed by Miss Anne Stonemetz of Washington before winning by a 1-up margin.

On the outgoing nine it was all even, but Mrs. Cralle found herself one down at the end of the sixteenth. She rallied to take the seventeenth and even up things, then dropped a 10-foot putt on the eighteenth for a par 3 and the match.

Mrs. Trouchard loses

Her opponent tomorrow is Mrs. George Owens of Petersburg, Va., who turned back Mrs. J. Trouchard of Washington, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Jim Reynolds, Virginia State titleholder, was not as hard pressed, defeating Mrs. Llewellyn Miller of Charlottesville, 5 and 4. Mrs. Reynolds' foe today is Mrs. S. R. Hall of the Country Club of Virginia, who stopped Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg of Baltimore, 1 up.

Another match tomorrow will pit Mrs. Rex Howard of Washington, against Mrs. Betty Meckley, also of Washington. Mrs. Meckley trimmed Mrs. C. T. Gemmill of Charlottesville, 5 and 4, while Mrs. Howard won over Mrs. T. Mencher of Washington, 1 up.

Today's results:

Joe Louis Takes Medal at Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Joe Louis today won the qualifying amateur medal of the First Annual Chicago Golf Tournament at the Kankakee Shores course with 1 under par 72. The tournament will continue through Thursday with 28 qualifiers competing in match play.

Football Roundup

G. W. Running Game Better Than in 1946

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 8.—With their third scrimmage session under their belts, the George Washington University Colonials are certain of one thing—they'll have a stronger running attack this year than they had in 1946.

Fullbacks Bill Spangler, converted from quarterback, and Paul Skinner, both 190-pounders, have looked exceptionally well, as has little Jimmy Kline, a wingback from Pennsylvania.

Coach Neil (Skip) Stahley is especially pleased with Spangler, for the big boy is finally showing the form he had under Stahley when they were both at the San Diego Naval Base during the war.

The steady jobs being turned in by Guards Bob Unger and Jim Regan, back from last year's team, also are to Stahley's satisfaction.

Georgetown Finds Four Good Centers

Sharp competition among four candidates for the center position is helping allay the fears of Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty about that vital spot.

Conceded a slight edge in third-week drills is big Phil Funk, graduate of Washington's Woodrow Wilson High. He was named on the All-Metropolitan team one season.

Another strong contender is 6 foot 2 inch, 200-pound Bob Kelly, from Chicago, where he starred at Leo High.

Dan Pace, another center, comes to the Hoyas from Port Chester High, N. Y., where he sparked his squad to two straight State championships. Fourth man in this center quartet is Ralph Benso, a graduate of Danbury High in Connecticut.

Baroni Shifted To End by Terps

Coach Jim Tatum shifted John Baroni from half back to end yesterday as the University of Maryland gridders dug into their second week of practice.

Tatum has plenty of backs and the shift of Baroni to end was viewed as an experiment to assure giving him plenty of opportunity to play.

The new Terrapin mentor said he has decided not to cut the squard which numbers about 90. He planned to divide it into two sections with one being carried as the varsity.

Giants on Mat Program Tonight

The giants of wrestledom will have featured booking on tonight's show at Turner's Arena, with Wlaidlsaw Talun, six-foot-eight from Poland, meeting Big Ben Morgan, the six-foot-six bearded Texan. Morgan weighs 340, Talun 320.

In the semiwindup Babe Sharkey, the former titleholder, will tackle Red Ryan. The Greek vs. Greek bout finds George Macricostas opposing Jesse James. Tiger Joe Marsh will face Stu Hart and Ed Franer will meet Farro Rinaldo in the opener at 8:45.

Pneumonia Puts Colts' Lio in Bed

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—Augie Lio, Baltimore guard and ace placekicker, is in a hospital with pneumonia contracted in Sunday's All-America Professional Football Conference game here with Brooklyn which was played in rain and mun, Coach Cecil Isbell announced today.

Dr. Erwin Mayer, club physician, said the condition of Lio, former Georgetown University star, is satisfactory. He is expected to be sidelined for a week or ten days, forcing him to miss next Sunday's game at San Francisco.

Favorites Gain in U. S. Net Singles

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 9 (AP).—Jaroslav Drobny, the bespectacled Czech star, finally began showing some of the form today that has made him the most feared of Europe's players as he smashed out a three-set victory over young Buddy Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the National Junior titleholder in the third round of the championships at the West Side Tennis Club.

For the first time, the stocky left-hander was forced to haul up some of his biggest guns to subdue 18-year-old Buddy, and they proved to be very potent weapons. The final score of the day's best match in the stadium was 6—2, 8—6, 6—1.

Already the experts were predicting that one of the greatest matches of the championships would take place in the quarter-finals, where Drobny appeared to be heading for a meeting with slammin' Tom Brown, jr., of San Francisco.

Tom, who came out of nowhere to prove the sensation of last year's nationals and reach the final against Jack Kramer, appears to be bringing his game up to a fighting peak again. It is far from a cinch that Drobny will get past him. Today the dark-browed Coast star was hitting bullets in his third-round win over Fred Kovaleski of Detroit, 6—4, 6—0, 6—8, 6—2.

Before the two meet, Drobny will have to get past classy Herb Flam, the former junior champion from Beverly Hills, and Brown must subdue Geoff Brown of Australia in the fourth round.

Kramer proceeded along his untroubled way toward his second straight championship as he annihilated Enrique Morea of Argentina, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4.

Pancho Segura, the permanent visitor from Ecuador, lost a set and then settled down to eliminate Bernard Bartzen, a lefthander from San Angelo, Tex., and William and Mary College, 6—8, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3. Flam advanced over Sam Match, a student at Rice Institute, by 6—1, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2.

Only four matches were played in he women's division and they were devoid of upsets. Louise Brough of Beverly Hills seeded second, led the field into the fourth round with a 6—2, 6—1 win over Beverly Baker, a promising youngster from Santa Monica.

Mrs. Nancy Bolton, Australian champion, defeated Mrs. Mary A. Prentiss of Los Angeles, 6—2, 7—5; Patricia Todd of Calif., beat Nina Irwin of New York City, 6—2, 6—0, and Dorothy Head of Alameda, Calif., eliminated Katharine Winthrop of South Hamilton, Mass., 6—3, 7—5.

Columbia Has Women's Play

Match play in the Columbia Country Club's women's championship will begin Wednesday morning in three flights.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, medalist, will meet Miss Betty Alvard in the opening match of the first flight. Mrs. Pray qualified with 87 to 88 for Mrs. John Ives and 93 for Miss Elinor Finckel.

Hogan, Snead Nelson Will Also Play

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Lew Worsham, the National Open champion from Washington, D. C., was named to the 10-man United States golf team which will play Great Britai nat Portland, Ore., November 1 and 2 for the Ryder Cup, Ed Dudley, president of the P. G. A. announced today.

The squad listed only two holdovers from the last United States team that met the British in 1937.

The 10-man squad is made up of Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret, Sam Snead, Lloyd Mangrum, Worsham, Ed Oliver, Herman Keiser, Herman Barron and E. J. "Dutch" Harrison.

The team this year was selected for the first time on a point system based on tournament performance since January 1, 1946, and perhaps the only surprise is the absence of big Viv Ghezzi, who tied for the National Open title last year, losing in the playoff, and was a semifinalist in the PGA tourney this year.

Nelson has not been active in tournament circles the past year, but his showing until his retirement in September, 1945, assured him of a place.

The British team, which will arrive in this country about October 22, still is in the process of selection, with two ore three places yet to be filled.

Except for the absence of Ghezzi, and Jim Ferrier, PGA champion who is not eligible because he was born in Australia, the selections announced today represent a virtual who's who of the current American tournament golf scene.

Nelson, Hogan, Snead and Demaret generally are rated the big four because of their consistent performance the past several years. Mangrum won the National Open in a three-way playoff in 1946, and Worsham is the current National Open champion and has just won the Denver Open.

Coach Worried

Middies Show Lack of Depth In Scrimmage

NAVAL AIR STATION, Whidby Island, Wash., Sept. 8.—After getting a good look at his Navy team in the first scrimmage, Coach Tom Hamilton is still greatly concerned as far as his shortage of reserve power is concerned.

While the first eleven with Markel and Russell at ends, Smith and Shimshak at tackles, Golding and Schiweck at guards, Scott at center and Baysinger, Schwoeffermann, Williams and Hawkins in the backfield, performed about as they were expected to, there was a lack of any brilliance as Hamilton delved deeper into his squad.

Frasier and Ryan indicated that they may be of some help. Chuck Strahley was the only tackle who showed promise while Scott Emerson and Bob Hunt should be of some help at guard. Tex Lawrence appears to be developing at center and will be available to relieve Dick Scott.

The backfield situation is not much brighted in the overall survey. Killen looks like the young man most likely to get the call when the capable Baysinger isn't barking the signals.

At left halfback, there is the problem of lack of power. Both Pete Williams and Billy Earl are talented, both being speedy runners and fair passers, but neither packs the weight to go through a tough line. Earl weighs 160 while Pistol Pete is 170.

* * * *

RIGHT HALF is in pretty good hands with Bob Schwoeffermann, a skinny six-footer, and Al McCully ready for varsity competition.

Bill Hawkins is the power at fullback with Myron Gerber possibly filling the bill as the number two man.

Fuse Solves Mystery of Missing Hazard

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—The water hazard at the ninth hole of the Bonnie View course was missing today, drained out through a blasted dam, and frustrated golfers who lost their balls and tempers there were being eyed with suspicion.

Greenskeeper Norman Gosnell discovered the mirage in reverse when, instead of a quarter-acre lake of water, he saw only a big mud hole.

Investigation led him to a big break in the middle of a 16-inch concrete dam. Police theorized dynamite was used after finding a fuse on the scene.

While the police investigated, Bonie View golfers went merrily around the course with one of their major mental hazards removed.

The Federal Diary

FDIC Staff Scheduled to Return From Chicago Soon

Date Will Depend On Availability of Space; Only 150 Employes Coming

By Jerry Kluttz

FDIC: A definite decision has been made to move the Chicago staff of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation back to this city. The transfer can be expected to get under way within a couple of months, depending on the availability of office space.

Kluttz

The office has about 250 employes in Chicago. No more than 150—if that many—may be expected to come here. This means FDIC will be in the market for 100 or more employes.

Officials hope to move the Chicago staff into its central offices in the Press Building. They are trying to make room by arranging for the transfer to another nearby structure of several private groups. The Alien Property Custodian is moving out of the Press building and his space will be turned over to FDIC.

CAREER: The Civil Service Commission will officially unveil today its stiff program to find jobs for the 1500 career people who were laid off in reductions of force.

Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming will go before a special meeting of the Federal Personnel Council to tell its members details of the sweeping plan, which were revealed here exclusively last Sunday. Briefly, the plan provides:

That each agency will be given a quota of jobless career people to place, the quota depending on the number of war service posts it has which the career people are qualified to fill;

That the commission will order the agencies to fire three war service people for each jobless career person, but the firing order will be withdrawn for those agencies that cooperate and find jobs for their quota of careerists; and,

That the application forms of the entire career group will be available at Civil Service for agency placement officers to examine and to match up skills with either jobs held by war service people, or to fill vacancies.

Flemming will make it clear to the agency personnel officials who make up the council that they will have the opportunity to make "reasonable offers" to the jobless group. Also, that the agencies will have the right of appeal on the certification by the commission to them of the career people for jobs.

The tough program, officials say, will break the resistance of agencies against placing the career people. In fact, a number of agency personnel people now admit that they have been forced into a position where they can no longer make excuses. However, they did object—and with some justification—against the previous plan under which they were asked to take sight-unseen career people for jobs being well performed by war service and temporary employes.

But no agency can afford to fight the new commission plan. Those that do must fire war service people equal to three times their career quota, and also, they will be forced to hire what is left of the career people after the best of them have been placed in other agencies.

PEOPLE: Laura E. Ethier will retire from the Food and Drug Administration after 40 years of Federal service. She served for a time as secretary to Dr. Harvey Wiley, father of the Food and Drug Act . . . George Moore, the hard-working staff director of the House Civil Service Committee, is a proud papa. It's a boy . . . Former President Herbert Hoover has asked the Library of Congress and other Federal agencies to gather information for use of the 12-man commission which will go to work soon on a plan to reorganize the Government. He's slated to be named chairman.

FPC: New officers of the Federal Power Lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes are Edythe McGinnis, president; John C. Mason, Rena G. Reinhardt, Marion P. Wojehoski, Louis Kaplan, Ralph E. Coomes, and Orson Huntsman, vice presidents; John Libby, treasurer; Frances Fogle, financial secretary, and Mary Steninger, recording secretary.

EXAM: Next Monday and Tuesday the Civil Service Commission will examine the 9600 persons in this area who applied for messenger jobs . . .

AGRICULTURE: Graduate School will give a course on accident prevention . . .

CIVIL SERVICE has started to displace a number of war service people who hold scientific, engineering, and biological aid jobs. It has a sufficient number of names on its eligible register to fill all such requests. And Civil Service officials say that long-pending examination for secretaries won't be announced before December.

Miss Pepper, Veteran Teacher, Appointed School Head's Aide

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Miss Margaret Pepper, teacher and principal in the District schools for nearly 30 years, yesterday was named executive assistant to the Superintendent of Schools by the Board of Education.

Her appointment filled one of two important vacancies in the school system. The other is the head of the music department for white schools.

Miss Pepper, principal of the Lafayette Elementary School since 1942, becomes the second woman currently to hold a top executive position in the D. C. schools. Miss Jessie LaSalle, in charge of educational research for white schools, has the title of associate superintendent.

The position of executive assistant previously was held by Dr. Carl F. Hansen, who last month was appointed associate superintendent in charge of white elementary schools, and of curriculum revision and planning for the entire system.

At the time of Dr. Hansen's appointment some local teachers' groups expressed their disappointment that a "local educator" was not named. Dr. Hansen came to Washington last March from Omaha, Nebr.

A native of Washington, Miss Pepper who lives at 1734 P st. nw., attended parochial and public elementary schools in the District. She was graduated from Western High School and Wilson Normal School and holds two degrees from George Washington University.

She began her teaching career in 1914 in the Alexandria public schools, and transferred to the District in 1916. She interrupted teaching to serve during the first world war as a secretary for the Navy League and clerk in charge of files at the War Trade Board.

During the recent war she was active in civilian defense groups, serving as an AWVS motor pool driver, stationed at the Pentagon, a supervisor at the Pepsi-Cola Service Club, and secretary of the Chevy Chase Civilian Defense Area.

In the educational field, Miss Pepper has specialized in child growth and development, and has organized classes in this subject at the Wilson Teachers College. Under her direction the Lafayette School became a model studied by Washington educators and teachers from other cities.

She has served as president of the Education Association of the District, and Columbian Women of George Washington University. She also is a member of the Elementary School Principals' Association, and the Joint Legislative Council of the Washington Schools and the Department of Classroom Teachers of the National Education Association.

South Capitol Street Bridge Contract Let

Commissioners Name W. C. Thompson Head Of Business Tax Unit

Working in a "vacation is over" atmosphere, the Commissioners yesterday waded through more than 100 items of District business.

Thompson

In addition to handling minor "routine" administrative tasks, the Commissioners:

1. Appointed Walter C. Thompson, D. C. tax division examiner, to head administration of the District's new tax on unincorporated businesses making gross incomes exceeding $10,000 a year.

2. Awarded the American Bridge Co. of Ambridge, Pa., a $2,329,043 contract to complete superstructure construction on the five-million-dollar,four-lane South Capitol st. bridge.

3. Approved "in principle" a proposal for a permanent citizens' committee to confer with District officials on any possible changes in fire safety regulations.

4. Discussed candidates for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board vacancy left by the death, Aug. 31, of Board Member William P. Meredith, but deferred selection until a later date.

Thompson was promoted to rank of chief examiner to take over the unincorporated business tax post. A native of Washington, he is a graduate Roosevelt High School and Benjamin Franklin University here. He became a District employe in 1929 an was assigned to the income tax division in 1937.

His job is one of five created in the 1948 District revenue act. Appointment of an examiner, a stenographer and two clerks to fill the other four positions is expected early next year, tax officials said.

Parents Postpone Action Against School Officials

Pulaski, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Patrons of Fairlawn School, where yesterday third graders had to return home because of lack of classroom space, last night voted to postpone their threatened legal action and give country school authorities an opportunity to increase accommodations.

All three grades at the school will share the two-room, tarpaper structure, according to arrangements made yesterday. Under the plan, first and second grade pupils were to report today at 8 a. m., and hold classes until noon. At noon, pupils of the third grade were to report and remain until 4 p. m.

Patrons of the school had already retained a Roanoke law firm to press suit designed to force Pulaski County to provide improved school facilities.

U. S. Jury to Get Stolen Car Case

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—J. Anthony Willis, 34, of Emmittsburg, Md., waived hearing and was held for Federal Grand Jury action today on a charge of transporting a stolen car across a State line.

State Trooper Kenneth Bond said he and FBI agents arrested Willis August 12 as he hid in a shack in the mountains near Thurmont, Md. They charged he stole a car July 3 from Harry C. Hewitt of Mount St. Mary's College and drove it from Thurmont to Waynesboro, Pa. Willis appeared before United States Commissioner C. Welles Little.

Motor Transport Strike Continues

Winchester, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—The strike of about 300 employes of seven large motor transport companies serving this area continued today after separate meetings last night of operators and workers.

Neither side would indicate today what happened, but a spokesman for the operators said it was the intention to hold a joint conference here, probably tomorrow afternoon.

Women on Md. Jury Held Contrary to Constitution

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—The practice of appointing women to Maryland juries was attacked as unconstitutional in Baltimore Circuit Court today, as several more Free State localities listed women appointees for future grand jury sessions.

An attorney representing a man accused of a holdup contended the women's jury service act is invalid because Maryland legislators exempted 12 of the State's 23 counties when they passed it last winter, after many years of turning it down.

Paul B. Mules challenged the act as attorney for Irvin D. Limper, a mechanic charged with holding up two Sunpapers newsboys August 19.

11 of 22 Are Women

When Judge J. Abner Sayler called Limper to trial in Criminal Court, 11 of the 22 prospective jurors were women. It was perhaps the first case called for trial with women on the panel. Mules filed a special challenge against the women.

He said Article 3, section 3 of the Maryland constitution forbids the enactment of special laws on subjects which should be covered by general law.

The exemption of 12 counties, Mules contended, made the Women's Jury Act a special law for the City of Baltimore and the 11 other counties. Court procedure, he said, is properly the subject of general law.

Cites Precedent

He recalled that the Maryland Court of Appeals several years ago invalidated repeal of the State "Declaration-of-Intenions" Act on the grounds some counties had been exempt and the legislation was therefore not uniform for the State.

John C. Weiss, assistant State's attorney, who was prosecuting the Limper case, told Judge Sayler he was not prepared to argue against the defense counsel's contention and asked for a delay. Sayler postponed the case for a week to permit both attorneys to prepare arguments.

Women also have been called for jury service this month in all the 11 non-exempt counties having September terms of the Circuit Courts.

At Salisbury, nine were listed in a panel of 23 persons yesterday; five were sworn in at Belair, and one woman was named to the grand jury at Laurel.

Jury Probes Gas Dealers' Price Survey

6 Filling Station Operators Testify In Investigation Of 'Fixing' in Area

Details of a price survey made by the Retail Gasoline Dealers, Inc., yesterday drew the attention of the grand jury that is investigating alleged fixing of gasoline prices in the Washington area.

The jury heard testimony from six witnesses yesterday, all of them operators of filling stations in Washington.

Two of the witnesses would not identify themselves. The others gave their names as Hubert Peterson, an independent dealer; Robert E. Harding and Harry C. Putnam, both of whom lease filling stations from the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey ,and Glen V. Ohler, a Shell Oil Co. dealer.

The witnesses said they were questioned about a number of things, but particularly about the petroleum products price survey. The dealers' association, they said, had supplied its members with detailed information on wholesale and retail prices in the industry.

The y said they were also asked about their relationship with the oil companies from which they lease their filling stations, and they said they told the grand jury that their prices were not fixed either by the oil companies or by the dealers' association.

Reports persist that the Justice Department will shortly launch other investigations here into prices of food, clothing and housing.

Playground Study Brings No Solution

The D. C. Recreation Board yesterday sparred with the problem of Washington's increasing need for additional playground facilities and then decided on further study of the matter.

Discussion arose out of a letter from a committee of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare. The letter said that Negro children of the Park View School neighborhood were forced to play in the streets and alleys because Park View playground is for white children only.

A board member asserted the neighborhood "is rapidly changing from a white to a colored area," and suggested the Recreation Department meet with members of the SCHW for discussion. A motion to this effect was approved.

Calls Problem Year-Round

Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender declared that the problem of adequate playground facilities is a "year-around one."

"Either we are going to have to change our fundamental policy," the sairman said, "or else find additional facilities." The board's "fundamental policy" calls for separate playground facilities for white and Negro children.

"The board," he said, "is well aware that there are neighborhoods in Washington where the problem is both older and worse." Such areas, he added, should be considered first. He cited the Petworth area as having no playground facilities at all.

Chairman Wender was "very gratified," however, by an opinion of the D. C. Corporation Counsel in another matter.

Private Owner Not Liable

An owner of private property on which a recreation program is conducted is not liable for injury sustained during the operation of the program, opined the counsel. Neither is the recreation department supervisor, the board, nor the District Commissioners, the opinion also held.

In other considerations, the board decided:

1. To renew its request of last February to the District Commissioners to "prepare appropriate legislation which will permit the board to operate the six swimming pools now under contract between Government Services, Inc., and the Interior Department."

2. To study the possibility of using land adjacent to the Anne Beers School for recreation purposes.

3. To confer with Motion Picture Theater Owners on next summer's free movie program.

Dean of Stanford Rates Middies With 'the Cream'

Annapolis, Sept. 9.—The Naval Academy's Midshipmen were rated among "the cream of university students" today by Dr. John A. Bartky, Stanford University dean, who is here to help the academy's faculty appraise its own progress.

Dr. Bartky, who is conducting a series of symposiums for academy instructors, said the Navy was conscious of the need of a sound general education for its officers, and described the academy students as "a more mature group who already have acqured a vocational interest."

"In another war," he continued, "the military would have to assume vast responsibilities. These would require a broad education."

Dr. Bartky said it was no more unusual for Naval officers to teach their profession than for physicians to instruct medical students. Almost 30 per cent of the Academy's instructors are officers.

Police Asked Why Accident Unit Was Cut

Barrett Tells Traffic Board Committee His Goal Was Efficiency

A citizens' group yesterday began probing the action of Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett in halving the number of investigators regularly assigned to the Accident Investigation Unit.

The group is the enforcement committee of the Traffic Advisory Board. Six members spend a half-hour talking to Barrett in his office and said the results of the conference would be announced Monday night at a meeting of the board.

Meanwhile, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Traffic Division, was reached in Chicago, where he reiterated a statement made earlier to The Washington Post that the number of investigator now on the AIU staff is substandard.

Efficiency Given as Aim

In discussing the conference he had with the enforcement committee, Barrett said the move reducing to three the number of AIU's investigators was solely to increase efficiency within the Police Department. He said that if the AIU should ever need more investigators it could call on any specialists on the force for aid.

"Furthermore," said Barrett, "I am going to seek stricter cooperation between the Traffic Division and the various precincts. It has always been policy to have this cooperation ,and there is a joint responsibility of precinct commanders and the AIU in traffic accidents."

The instruction as to precinct-AIU cooperation has not yet been issued, Barrett said.

Inspector Miller is attending a meeting of the American Transit Association. He said that shortly after his return here he would seek another meeting with Barrett to discus sprecedure within the AIU.

One is "Swing Man"

At present, there is but one investigator regularly assigned to day and evening shifts of the AIU. The third investigator is a "swing man," working on the days off of the others. Miller said it was considered standard to have one man in six assigned to investigation in such units as the AIU. In Washington, but one man in 12 is so assigned.

The entire hit-and-run squad of the AIU has been abolished.

The conference between Barrett and the enforcement committee, Barrett said, included a discussion of the Washington Post story about the AIU reduction of force. Barrett said the story was "onesided."

Uresent at the meeting with Barrett were Washington I. Cleveland, E. Goring Bliss, Nathan M. Luber, Baxter Smith, Arthur J. Sundlun and Mrs. Elinor Kirwan.

200 Return to Work In Campbell Soup Plant

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Two hundred workers were back on the job yesterday in the pepper processing section of the Campbell Soup Co.'s Eastern Shore plant, but Manager W. L. Parvin said 500 others still on strike prevented the firm from resuming tomato packing.

The stoppage, involving 700 employes, began Thursday, Parvin said, when a group of men met other workers outside the plant and told them that operations were suspended.

Child Needs Birth Record For School

In preceding articles we have dealt with the general phases of preparing your child for his entrance or return to school. It cannot be too strongly restated that the duty and responsibility of getting the child ready for his primary task—going to school—rests with you parents.

For children who are entering school for the first time, certain legal requirements must be met before the child may register.

The laws of the District of Columbia require these two things: presentation of a birth certificate, and the record of a successful vaccination against smallpox. Children, of course, under the newer regulations of the District Commissioners must be bona fide residents of the District.

First and foremost is the matter of having a birth certificate. The presentation of a birth certificate is required on registration. If parents do not have a birth certificate in their possession, one may be procured from the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the D. C. Health Department. Children not born in the District should obtain a birth certificate from the health department of the State in which the children were born.

The original copy should have been sent to the family shortly after the birth of the child. However, if one is not readily available at home, parents should obtain a copy of the certificate. In Washington, additional copies may be procured for 50 cents; in other States the certificates will be supplied for a nominal fee.

A successful vaccination against smallpox is compulsory before entrance to school. A well-marked scar or a physician's certificate, if possible, should be ready for the child upon registration. Precautions against smallpox have made this disease virtually extinct in the United States. The last case of smallpox in Washington occurred in 1932, and the last death attributed to smallpox in the District was in 1925.

Act now to have your child ready and fit for school this year.

Dr. Ruhland's article in The Washington Post tomorrow, will assist in making the children of Washington ready and fit for return to school.

Information relating to birth certificates may be obtained from Joseph B. Irvine, director, Bureau of Vital Statistics, National 6000, Extension 2117.

Annapolis Man Indicted For Murder of Wife

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Nason D. Carey, 45, of Annapolis was indicted by an AnneArundel County grand jury today on a charge of murdering his wife, Alverta, in their home early in June.

Police asserted at the time that Mrs. Carey's body, her head beaten, was found after her husband walked into headquarters to report her death.

$5000 Blaze Wrecks House In Fairfax

Couple Forced To Spend Night In Repair Shop

If H. H. Slack didn't own a repair shop on Route 7 in Fairfax County, he and his wife would have lacked a place to sleep Monday night.

Their 4-room frame house next to the shop, was largely destroyed by fire when a kerosene stove exploded, when Mrs. Slack was canning. Damage was estimated at $5000. Most of the furniture was destroyed.

The Slacks spent the night in their repair shop, which is about 2 miles west of Tyson's Corner. But Slack saiy they would try to sleep in one of the front rooms of the house last night.

Fire trucks from Falls Church, McLean, Vienna, and Forestville fought the blaze which broke out about 9:30 p. m.

2 Fliers Believed Killed in Crash In Dismal Swamp

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Two naval reserve airmen were believed killed Monday afternoon when a Navy plane en route from Floyd Bennett Field, N. Y., to Cherry Point, N. C., crashed in the dismal swamp about six miles northeast of Lake Drummond.

Wreckage of a torpedo bomber was spotted today by the pilot of a Coast Guard helicopter from the Elizabeth City Coast Guard Air Station. The Norfolk Naval Air Station dispatched two weasels, a crash truck and an ambulance to the site, but heavy underbrush and soft earth slowed their progress.

F. F. Caldwell, who lives near the scene of the accident, reported that he saw a plane dive into the ground and explode yesterday afternoon about 2:35 o'clock.

Manslaughter Guilty Plea Made In Harbor Death

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—Lloyd Douglas George, 26-year-old seaman, pleaded innocent of murder but guilty of manslaughter today in the death of Doris O'Brien, 40, whose trussed and weighted body in a canvas sack was fished from the Baltimore Harbor.

Judge J. Abner Sayler deferred sentence. Defense lawyer Paul B. Mules urged the sentence be "nominal." Mules said the woman died from a fall during a "drunken party" aboard a barge docked here. A native of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., she was found in the harbor July 23.

A statement from George, who did not testify, was read in which he related trying for 12 hours to revive the woman after she fell. He then decided, the statement continued, to dispose of her body.

Fire Losses Here Reverse U. S. Trend, Drop 32%

Reduction Is Made Despite Increase In Number of Blazes Reported

District fire losses dropped 32 per cent during the year ended June 30, despite mounting Nationwide fire damage that threatens to reach an all-time high in 1947.

This was revealed yesterday when Fire Chief Clement Murphy's annual report for fiscal 1947 was compared with Nationwide estimates released by the National Fire Protection Association.

Chief Murphy's report informed the Commisisoners that fire loss here amounted to $1,349,490 in fiscal 1947, an amount $633,980 less than the previous year's total.

At the same time, the National Fire Protection Association predicted the Nation's property loss would reach 700 million dollars this calendar year, topping the 1946 total by 25 per cent and setting a new record.

The District fire loss reduction was made despite a jump in the number of fires reported, which increased from 5451 the previous year to 5586 in fiscal 1947.

The number of serious fires, where more than one alarm was necessary, was reduced more than 50 per cent, however, from 53 in fiscal 1946 to 26 last year, Murphy revealed.

There was a 33 per cent increase in the number of fire prevention inspections made here, bringing the 12-month total to 148,019. And 13,698 property owners were notified to correct fire hazards, 27 per cent more than during the previous year.

The report, which covers Chief Murphy's first complete administrative year since he took office in March, 1946, also listed the following activities:

1. The Fire Department began operating its own radio station, WAKY, and ardio coverage was extended to 15 additional pieces of fire equipment.

2. Two new schools were set up for training officers and pump operators.

3. An Official Training Procedure Manual and a Pump Manual were compiled and published in book form.

4. New, less expensive small hose was obtained for the first time. The smaller hose, only 1½ inches in diameter, is designed for "increased mobility and speed of operations," the report stated.

5. A new fireboat was obtained "without cost" from the United States Navy to replace the veteran "Firefighter" in providing waterfront protection.

6. The Commissioners transferred administration of fire alarm headquarters from the Electrical to the Fire Department.

Police Aim At Sidewalk Bicyclists

Sidewalk bicyclists are the object of the Police Department's latest crackdown.

Walter H. Thomas, assistant superintendent, yesterday ordered the force to "make every effort" to get cyclists to comply with regulations. The object is to prevent a wave of accidents caused by negligent bicyclists.

Thomas noted that complaints have become numerous lately of bicycles being ridden on sidewalks, and said this practice leads to accidents. He pointed out that traffic regulations provide that riders cannot travel "within or across any sidewalk area, except at a permanent or temporary roadway."

Between January and September 1 this year, 148 bicyclists were injured here, one fatally. During the same period last year, 129 cyclists were injured. In all of 1945, only 115 bicyclists were hurt in accidents.

In his order, Thomas said, "Bicycle riders have greatly increased in recent months, and every effort must be made to have them comply with the regulations, and thereby prevent accidents to themselves and others."

Besides the sidewalk riders, other menaces cited were those who carry passengers on the handlebars and frames, pass red lights and stop signs, drive on the wrong side of the street and carry no lights at night. The fines imposed may be as high as $300.

The American Automobile Association has long been interested in the problem of bicycles and in its safety hints has cited the regulations mentioned here. In 1946, 546 persons were killed in and 25,000 injured in bicycle accidents throughout the Nation, the AAA said. Of those injured, 500 were less than 4 years olds and 700 were more than 65 years old, according to the statistics.

Greenbelt Registration of 1603 Indicates Record Vote Tuesday

Greenbelt, Md., Sept. 9.—The possibility of a record vote in next Tuesday's municipal election was seen today in registration figures which placed the number of qualified voters in the town at an all-time high.

According to Mrs. Winfield McCancy, town clerk, 1603 persons have registered for the election, in contrast to the previous record figure of 1104 set in 1945. Interest centering on the race has been enlivened by the fact that a total of 20 candidates are seeking the five seats on the Town Council.

The old council, all of whose members are seeking reelection, completed its two-year term Monday night at a meeting marked by passage of an amendment to a town ordinance to permit members of churches or religious groups to cast absentee ballots in the event an election day falls on a religious holiday. The amendment provides the ballots could be cast up to three days before the election date.

Participating in the final session were Mayor George Bauer and Councilmen Allen D. Morrison, Paul Dunbar and Joseph L. Rogers.

The five incumbents will be opposed in next Tuesday's balloting by Thomas J. Sanning, Abraham Chasanow, Sherrod East, George M. Eshbaugh, Vernon T. Fox, David M. Granahan, Benjamin P. Goldfadden, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Harrington, Herbert Hertz, Frank J. Lastner, Allen M. Lawrence, Adelbert C. Long, Frank J. McConnell, Albert J. Schaffer and James C. Smith.

All of the candidates have been invited to appear next Monday night at an election eve rally to be held under sponsorship of the Greenbelt Citizens Association at the Greenbelt School. Each speaker will be given three minutes in which to outline his platform.

Old Fashioned Rain Beats Dry Ice to It

Staunton, Va., Sept. 9 (Spl.).—It rained here today while Pilot H. P. Grim, jr., was getting ready to sow dry ice on a cloud to make it rain.

Grim disclaimed all responsibility for the drizzles which dampened the Staunton area twice today, but he is still readying a Vultee BT-13 plane and devising his own ice-sowing hopper in case it doesn't rain enough.

Cheered by reports of successful rain-making in scattered parts of the country and disheartened by Staunton's lack of rain and the falling water level in the North River reservoir, City Manager W. Guy Ancell is willing to try artificial means.

The try will be made during the next lack of rain.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 9.—William Harrison Tobin, 23, Stephens City, is being held without bond here on a rape charge. He was taken into custody at Middletown after an attack on a 17-year-old girl early Sunday morning. The case will come before the grand jury Monday.

Scouts to Prove Skill

Boy Scouts of the Fairfax District of the National Capital Area Council will display their skills at a scout camporee at Manassas National Battlefield Park September 19-21.

Troops will be assigned a battlefield area near Chinn House, where they will camp. Outstanding men in scouting will be speakers and counselors. Visitors will be welcome after 2 p. m. September 21.

Mrs. Lane on Skirts

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., wife of the Governor of Maryland, and recently selected to head the list of the 10 best-dressed women in the State, says she will adopt a moderate attitude toward the new below-the-knee styles.

Mrs. Lane said she would lengthen her dresses "a little, if possible, without going to extremes."

She explained that new styles often are "quite extreme" at the beginning, but become more conventional as time passes.

'Constitution Day' Set

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Gov. Tuck has called on Virginians to celebrate September 17 as "Constitution Day," in accordance with a resolution of Congress commemorating the 160th anniversary of the date on which delegates of the young States met in Philadelphia to sign the final draft of the Federal Constitution.

Rev. Helwig to Utica

Frederick, Md., Sept. 9.—The Rev. E. Koontz Helwig, pastor of the Lutheran charge at Lemaster, Pa., has accepted a call to become pastor of Utica Lutheran parish, with churches at Walkersville, Creagerstown, Utica and Bethel. He succeeds the Rev. Francis E. Reinberger, who resigned in April to take a church at Camp Hill, Pa.

County Fair's 100th Year

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 9.—This year's Charles County Fair, to be held near Bel Alton September 24-28, will celebrate its 100th anniversary. The first fair, according to P. D. Brown, president of the Charles County Fair, Inc., was held at Port Tobacco, the old county seat, in 1847.

7th Allegany Polio Case

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Five-year-old William Merkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merkel of this city, has become Allegany County's seventh polio victim. He was taken to Sydenham Hospital, Baltimore, in a State police ambulance.

Seven cases are the greatest number in one year in the county since the 14 of 1933. Deaths already have numbered two, the top number since five of 1928.

Editors to Visit Va.

Warsaw, Va., Sept. 9.—Twenty editors of nation-wide travel publications will tour the northern Virginia peninsula area on Monday, September 22. The tour is part of a five-day pilgrimage arranged jointly by the Virginia Conservation Commission and the State Chamber of Commerce.

Va. Biologist Named

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Charles Henry Shaffer, who received his master's degree in wildlife conservation from Virginia Tech, has been named to the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries staff as field biologist in the Lynchburg region, effective September 15, I. T. Quinn, executive director of the commission, said today.

Shaffer will succeed Dr. Henry S. Mosby, who has been named director of the cooperative wildlife research station at Blacksburg. . .

'Queen of Tolerance'

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 9.—Candidates for the title "Queen of Tolerance" of the St. Mary's County Fair, to be held in Calvert September 19-21, are being named at dances throughout the county. The queen will be crowned at St. Mary's City, birthplace of the Act of Tolerance, on September 20. Runners-up for the title will serve as the queen's court.

Push-Button Farming

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 9.—An era of pushbutton farming was seen today as E. T. Swink, associate agricultural engineer for the State Extension Service, outlined advantages of electrically driven feed grinding and mixing equipment as time and money-savers on Virginia's farms.

Equipment powered with electric motors of 7½ horsepower and less can do an "excellent job" if properly selected, installed and operated, he said. Listing convenience, economy and availability of fresh feed as top benefits, Swing said that grinders, ready to operate at the push of a button, also release tractors for important field work.

Traffic Bureau Planned

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Newly appointed Chief of Police R. Emmett Flynn said today he planned to establish a traffic bureau headed by Sgt. Raymond R. Johnston and that he would recommend Johnston's promotion to lieutenant.

Flynn also disclosed that starting September 16 he would start a series of training courses for officers. Classes will be conducted four times yearly, he said.

Scientists Meeting

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 9.—Fifty representatives of seven scientific societies and 14 universities are attending the semiannual business meeting of directors of the Social Science Research Council here. The meetings end Thursday.

Triplett 'About Same'

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—The condition of Delegate L. Lake Triplett, 61, who was injured in a truck-automobile accident Saturday, was "about the same" today, attendants at Physicians' Hospital here reported, and described his condition as "hopeful." Delegate Triplett's left arm was severed at the shoulder when his car and a truck sideswiped.

Surplus Foods Sought

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—A meeting preliminary to setting up a distribution system which will permit small Maryland institutions to obtain surplus Federal foods has been held here by the Council of Social Agencies.

The meeting was an aftermath of unsuccessful attempts by Representative Miller (R., Md.) to obtain potatoes for the Children's Home on the Eastern Shore. The Congressman found that distribution of surplus foods was in carload lots only, making it impossible for small institutions to participate in the Government plan.

Representatives of 40 institutions yesterday agreed creation of an agency to receive the carload lots and arrange for distribution in smaller lots was the solution.

175th Anniversary

Berryville, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Special services will be held Sunday to mark the 175th anniversary of the founding of the First Baptist Church here. Pastors of other Berryville churches have announced that their congregations will worship with the Baptists at morning and night services and a picnic lunch will be served at noon Sunday.

Oysters Survive Drills

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Francis Beaven, oyster biologist of the Department of Research and Education, said today the 1945 set of oysters in Tangier Sound was likely to escape severe damage from drills which prey on young bivalves.

Beaven recalled that in 1945 there were freshets which heavily damaged the oyster crop in upper Chesapeake Bay. These also destroyed many oyster drills in Tangier Sound. But with a drop in salinity, there was a good set of oysters in 1945. These have now grown beyond the stage at which drills do most of their damage.

Sunday Movies Studied

Winchester, Va., Sept. 9.—The Ministerial Association took no stand today on the plan of theater operators to show movies on Sunday here after September 28, but announced it will make a public statement later this week.

Movies have not been open here on Sunday in the past, but there is no city ordinance against them. Theaters have announced they will not be open during regular church hours.

17 Candidates Enroll

Seventeen candidates for positions as supervisors of dairy herd improvement associations have enrolled in a two-week training course at the University of Maryland, the school's extension service said yesterday.

The students, 15 from Maryland and two from West Virginia, are seeking to qualify for tester's licenses—the first step toward obtaining positions as supervisors in dairy associations in their respective States. They are receiving instruction in sampling and testing milk, computing production figures and determining production costs.

The course, which is under the direction of Prof. Marvin Senger, instructor in dairy husbandry, will continue through September 20.

Cut-Rate City Engineer

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—This city had a municipal engineer today for the first time in three years, and at an annual salary of only $1. J. R. McCrone, jr., offered his srevices cut-rate and the council immediately accepted.

Cedarhurst Blaze Injures 10 Firemen

Cedarhurst, Md., Sept. 8 (AP).—Ten firemen were injured early today as 18 companies from three counties fought a stubbor blaze which swept part of the rag warehouse at the Congoleum-Nairn Co.'s felt making plant.

The flames, which started in one of several buildings on the plant property, were brought under control about midnight approximately three hours after they were discovered by Night Watchman Frank Freberthauser. An automatic sprinkler system immediately went into action, Freberthauser said, and prevented spread of the fire to other buildings.

Chief Lester H. Greene of the Westminster Fire Department, who said he believed the fire was due to spontaneous combustion, reported that the rags probably would smoluder for several days.

Approximately 6500 pounds of rags and paper were stored in the building, but Plant Superintendent A. E. Sprinkle said that a "large amount" would be recovered. There was no official estimate of the damage. The flames were confined to a 200-foot area.

At the height of the fire 50 lines of hose were used with water beeing pumped from the nearby Patasco River. About 30 pieces of fire department apparatus were on the scene and a tremendous amount of water was sprayed into the building in an effort to extinguish the flames.

Fire departments from Carroll, Baltimore and Howard Counties responded to the alarm, while State Police and Westminster officers assisted in keeping in check the hundreds of spectators who flocked to the scene.

The plant, which employs about 275 men, is expected to resume full scale productio ntoday but some time will be required to resort the material which was in the path of the fire and water.

The fire could be seen for about three miles and was similar to one which hit the property 20 years ago. The last fire smouldered for four days. The plant is third largest in the Congoleum-Nairn system.

Action Deferred On Big U. of Md. Building Program

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—The Board of Public Works today deferred action on a proposed multimillion dollar construction program for the University of Maryland, pending receipt of an opinion on the project from the attorney general.

The program, proposed by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, in June, had been tentatively scheduled for discussion at today's meeting of the board. In the absence of the attorney general's opinion, however, no action will be taken at least until next week, when the board is slated to meet again.

Included among Byrd's proposals were plans for a stadium, auditorium and physical education building, a chapel and a swimming pool costing an estimated $2,350,100. He suggested the additions could be built without cost to the State if the university were authorized to issue bonds, which would be paid off from the gate receipts of athletic contests.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Maj. Francis W. Regnier will command an Army medical reserve officers' training corps unit which will be organized at the start of the 1947-48 term of the University of Virginia.

38 Va. Firms Register for Air Transport

Thirty-eight small air transport companies in Virginia including one in Alexandria, have received letters of registration from the Civil Aeronautics Board, it was announced yesterday.

The applications were made since June under new regulations governing the operation of nonscheduled carriers. The CAB records show 1195 have been filed throughout the country.

The small operators generally handle both passenger anr cargo traffic on a nonscheduled basis. They may operate overseas, but after tomorrow this service will be limited to cargo carrying.

The new regulations under which the CAB now maintains supervision of the nonscheduled air carriers were issued May 26. They require letters of registration for both companies operating prior to that date and for new concerns.

The Viriginia companies listed by the CAB as having been granted letters of registration are:

Alexandria Airport, Inc., Alexandria; Grim Flying Service, Inc., Staunton; Hummel Aviation, Hopewell; Pulaski Aviation Service, Pulaski; Edmondson Flying Service, Inc., Clover; Virginia Cub Distributors, Charlottesville; Norton School of Aviation, Norton; Chincoteague Seaplane Base, Chincoteague Island; Lynchburg Air Transport & Sales Corp., Lynchburg;

In addition, applications have been filed with no letters yet issued for Cavalier Aviation, Inc., Richmond, and Layman Weikle, Covington.

Holdup Attempt Brings 5 Years

Berryville, Va., Sept. 9.—A Grand Jury here yesterday indicted Arthur Junior Moten on breaking and entering and theft charges and set his trial date of October 3.

In its opening session, the Circuit Court sentenced Kenneth Jackson to five years in the State penitentiary for attempting to hold up and rob Lawrence Oats of Front Royal.

The Court also set September 11 as trial date in a $10,000 damage suit against the Norfolk and Western RR by T. Fleet and Elizabeth from an N. & W. train set fire and caused extensive damage to their cherry orchard.

Staunton Papers Up Price to 5 Cents

Staunton, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Effective September 14, prices per copy of the Staunton News Leaer and Evening Leader will be raised to 5 cents instead of the present 3.

The Leader papers are believed to be the last in the State to boost prices. Increased costs of newsprint, labor and other factors were given as reason for the hike.

10,000 Pay Tax Quota

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Approximately 10,000 Virginians have paid their third installment on 1947 estimated Federal income tax, which is due Monday, Stuart Crenshaw, acting collector of Internal revenue, said today.

Md. to Probe Charge of Pay Law Evasion

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—An investigation of payment of overtime to State employes was ordered today by the Board of Public Works after an employes' representative said workers were being coerced.

Governor Lane made public a letter from Charles D. Harris, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employes Association, charging State departments were "circumventing the plain words of the law," which requires overtime payments after 48 hours.

The board directed the Standard Salary Board and the Department of Budget and Procurement to investigate the situation, which was brought out at the board meeting by a Department of Correction request for $51,352 in overtime pay for guards.

Asked to Arrange Work

Previously the board had asked department heads to arrange work wherever possible to eliminate overtime, since no provisions for such pay were made in the budget except for the State Roads Commission.

Harris' letter said department heads were coercing workers by saying there were no budget provisions for overtime, that the board had given orders against such payments and that workers making over certain amounts were not to receive overtime.

In another action, the board approved the Department of Tidewater Fisheries request for $6000 to buy another amphibian plane to enforce the law.

It approved a request for authority to proceed with plans for specifications on a new barn and addition to the water supply at Spring Grove State Hospital, costing a total of $136,000.

The board decided to pay $6849 for a survey of Cumberland's economic survey made by the University of Maryland.

Deficiency Action Deferred

It deferred action on a $107,000 defficiency created when the legislature failed to apportion the sum to pay half the salary of supervisors of assessments in the counties. Governor Lane said it would be a subject for the special session of the legislature.

Approval was given to paying $900 architectural fees for work on the science building at Frostburg State Teachers College, given to the State by the Federal Government.

The board decided to offer the services of Irvin Young of the Bureau of Revenue Estimates in the proposed fiscal research bureau. Dr. Horace E. Flack, director of the Bureau of Legislative Reference, told the board it was impossible to set up the fiscal unit with the funds allotted and asked a supplemental fund of $2377.

A $2168 increase in the Board of Natural Resources budget was approved.

Md. Fair Cattle Inoculated in Fever Attacks

Timonium, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Wholesale inoculation of all cattle exhibited at the Maryland State Fair has been carried out under the direction of the Livestock Sanitary Service, in an effort to restrict an outbreak of shipping fever.

The disease, known by the technical name of Hemorrhagic septicemia, appeared in the beef cattle barn, and two cases occurred among dairy cattle before the illness was diagnosed.

All cattle on the fair grounds were quarantined immediately, but were released after the inoculation. Exhibitors will not be prevented from taking their show herds to the York Interstate Fair, which opened today.

Granville H. Hibberd, superintendent of dairy cattle exhibits here, said there was no Maryland or Pennsylvania law requiring cattle to be inoculated against the fever for interstate shipment. Hibberd said the fair did not have such a regulation either, but added there would probably be such a rule next year.

Mrs. J. MacVeagh

Mrs. Lincoln MacVeagh, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece, died last night in Athens after an illness of several weeks, according to The Associated Press.

Mrs. MacVeagh, the former Margaret Charlton Lewis of New York, was married to MacVeagh August 17, 1917. There is one child, Margaret Ewan MacVeagh. The MacVeagh's home is at New Canaan, Conn.

Maryland Warns Virginia It May Lift Crabbing Controls

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—Virginia officials were "on notice" today by the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission it is "seriously considering allowing an unlimited catch of crabs in Chesapeake Bay" unless the Old Dominion matches the restrictions of the Free State.

John E. Clark, commission chairman, announced at a meeting of the Board of Natural Resources that it planned to confer with Virginia officials "on the whole matter of crab fishing in bay waters."

Lifting of all Maryland's present controls may be recommended, he said, if it appears that conservation controls are being nullified by lack of Virginia limitations.

"We will not conserve here while they do the catching," Clark declared. He reported that Virginia authorities were reluctant to discuss uniform curbs on crabbing and Marylanders were at a "distinct disadvantage because of their own stringent regulations.

Meanwhile, the board approved a set of regulations for crabbing in the waters of the Chincoteague, Sinepuxent, Ise of Wight and Assowoman bays and their tributaries in Worcester County.

Meanwhile, at Rock Hall, approximately 50 Kent County watermen last night picked the first five-man committee to advise the Department of Tidewater Fisheries on conservation of oysters, fish and crabs.

The group named George Davis of Rock Hall, Charles Kirby of Quaker Neck, Madisoz Coleman of Poney Neck, Milford Carr of East Neck Island and Roby Kelly of Skinner's Neck to the first of similar groups from Tidewater Counties.

Di Girolamo Funeral Rites Set For Today

Fire Destroys Barn

Frederick, Md., Sept. 9.—Fire early yesterday destroyed a large barn, wagon shed and small house on the farm of Keefer Adkins, between Middletown and Jefferson. Harvey Lescalleet, tenant, said the barn contained half a mow of newly-made hay and some farm machinery. Firemen were handicapped by lack of water.

2 U. S. Ships Are Towed in After Collision

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Two American ships were towed to Hampton Roads today for repair of severe damage sustained in a collision 3 miles northeast of Cape Henry last night. Two crewmen injured in the crash were removed by Coast Guard vessels and hospitalized at Norfolk.

The Coast Guard reported that the 7191-ton freighter Winifred Smith's bow struck the port side of the 7218-ton tanker Thomas F. Cunningham just forward of the bridge.

An SOS from the freighter brought Coast Guard vessels and commercial tugs to the assistance of the ships. The Wood Towing Co., whose tugs towed the ships into Hampton Roads, reported this afternoon that the Winifred Smith, out of Norfolk for Europe with coal, had her bow sove in and was down 4 feet by the head. She was berthed at the Lambert's Point piers.

The towing company said the Thomas F. Cunningham, inbound from Aruba with oil, was too low in the water to tow to a pier and was anchored in a deep water anchorage.

The two injured were taken aboard Coast Guard picket boat and cutter and rushed to Little Creek and from there by ambulance to the United States Marine hospital here.

Truman to Beam Radio Message To the Ladies

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

"NEVER UNDERESTIMATE the power of a woman" is a slick slogan to which President Truman is bowing gracefully October 8. For the first time in history, a President is beaming a radio broadcast directly at women. It's all part of the Democratic Women's Day celebration and naturally the ladies are a-flutter.

The ladies, political and otherwise, are up to a lot of interesting new things these days. For instance, a number of far-seeing present and former Washingtonians are converging on Paris, September 28, for the International Assembly of Women for World Peace.

Mme. Georges Bidault, wife of France's Premier, is president, and women from 40 countries will be present. Non-political, nonsectarian, many from rural and industrial classes, they represent a group of women seldom reached before; women who know little about international affairs, who are unfamiliar with political jargon. It's their first meeting, and naturally women's responsibilities for peace, both international and through private organizations, are going to be discussed.

But one of the main concerns is to find ways and means of feeding the world's children. Then, the knowledge accumulated will be passed on to the United Nations. Much of the driving force behind the conference stems from a smaller meeting held in Paris in 1945 and from an International Assembly of Women gotten together at South Kortright, N. Y., by Washington's Helen Mountfort Moodie. Mrs. M., former secretary of the United Nations Forum and chairman of the Women's Conference on International Affairs, is going to Paris, and after the conference will act as observer for a number of labor organizations. Lillian Mowrer is going, too, and among half a dozen others are Mrs. J. L. B. Buck, new president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Thomas McAllister, now of Grand Rapids, but who was director of the women's division of the Democratic Party when she lived in Washington, and who will represent the Democratic ladies.

Chain of Friendship

EVERYONE remembers Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Whitehurst, both social leader and effective political combatant, worked for some 23 years in Maryland, her home State, to put over an amendment which would permit women to serve on juries.

A short time ago the amendment was passed and Mrs. Whitehurst was neatly hoist on her own net petard. Right now she is serving a three-week term as juror in Baltimore's Court of Common Pleas and missing out on all sorts of excitement.

Mrs. Whitehurst, now president of the Foreign and Territorial Clubs, is helping forge a real chain of friendship around the world. The F. and T. Clubs, a division of the federation, was founded three years ago and some 70 foreign clubs, launched by American women all over the world, are part and parcel of it. For convenience Mrs. Whitehurst has divided the world into six regions. Then, using lists of needy families acquired from embassies and other sources, club members have worked out a letter contact program. They not only write letters but also send a staggering amount of gifts, food, clothes and whatnot. They're acquiring an immense number of cultural contacts, too, and before long it's hoped there'll be an exchange of students and teachers.

White Elephants, Ltd.

SEPTEMBER'S the month when every female ransacks closets. If there's a really handsome possession you're bored with or if you don't know what to do with the priceless lace tibbet and the fragile Dresden china Aunt Nellie left you—we'll tell you what to do.

Just take your white elephants to Mrs. Charles Baker, who runs Commissions, Limited. Mrs. Baker only accepts the handsome, valuable and rare. If they don't meet her high standards, she'll turn them down cold.

You set the price and if your personal elephants don't move you've only yourself to blame. However, Mrs. Baker's a canny appraiser and knows approximately what almost anything can be sold for.

Like most successful ventures, Commissions, Limited, started by accident. Lee Baker, who dabbles in real estate, bought a small Georgetown apartment house, didn't want to dislodge the upstairs tenants. What to do with the ground floor? Friends suggested she sell their white elephants. The shop was the answer.

Birthdays Come Double

Schwellenbach Family Clan To Gather for Celebration

By Marie McNair

SECRETARY OF LABOR AND MRS. SCHWELLENBACH will leave Washington soon for Seattle where there'll be a very special celebration on September 20.

That's the day of a dual birthday party for the Secretary and his mother. Although their natal days are actually a day or two apart it's been a family custom for years to celebrate them together.

It's a day, too, for a reunion of the clan with other members of the family gathering for the event.

Secretary Schwellenbach seems now to have completely recovered from an illness which forced him to take a six-week rest at Bethesda Naval Hospital recently.

In an accident which happened a year ago the Secretary slipped and fractured a vertebra. The doctor ordered a cast but Mr. Schwellenbach disobeyed his ruling and was back at his office in three days wearing a heavy iron brace to protect the fracture while it knit.

It didn't heal properly and the pain finally forced him to do what the doctor had advised in the first place. He looks like a different man now, for with the drawn look on his face have also gone a few extra pounds.

NO "poor little rich girl" is Christine Cromwell Williams, although she'll some day inherit a good many millions.

The daughter of Jimmy Cromwell, a granddaughter of the late Horace Dodge of Detroit, Mrs. Williams isn't banking on the fortune that will some day be hers.

She lives in unprentious fashion with her husband, Edward I. Willimas, jr. in Arlington, Va., has been known to do her own housework if the occasion arises. Extremely talented, blond and pretty, Christine plays the piano beautifully, paints with better than average success and designs and makes many of her own clothes.

Congratulations are due this young lady who's celebrating a birthday anniversary today. In honor of the event her aunt, Mrs. Alf Heilberg, will give a cocktail party this afternoon at her home in Georgetown.

Incidentally, Louise Heiberg has a birthday herself before long. "I'm not telling a soul," she says. It's the 24th of this month. And NOW the secret's out!

TOWN TOPICS:

Mrs. George Mesta is coming to town from Newport for the wedding of Francine Whitten and Lewis MacCracken on the 19th. She'll be here in time for the annual champagne and orchids fall opening at the Mayflower on September 18, always one of the first big events of the season.

Perle Mesta is just about bursting with pride over the fact that she's a great aunt, with the birth of a daughter to her favorite niece, Betty Tyson Lyeth. The baby, named for her maternal grandmother, is Marguerite Skirvin Lyeth. Betty, now Mrs. J. Richardson Lyeth, jr., the No. 1 glamor deb at Newport a few summers ago, is living with her husband in Detroit.

George Slavik, son of the Czechoslovak Ambassador and Mme. Slavik, gave a young people's party yesterday afternoon as a send-off to a pal—George McLain, leaving soon for Staunton Military Academy.

Parties for Mary Elizabeth Jervey who will be married on Saturday to Armistead Claiborne Leigh, have kept up in steady pace. There was a bridge luncheon and shower yesterday given by Miss Mary Whelan and today Miss Lisette Littlehales will entertain at cocktails for the bride-to-be and her fiance. Friday night Col. Randolph Leigh, father of the soon-to-be benedict, and Mrs. Leigh, will give a big dinner party for the wedding party and out-of-town guests following the rehearsal.

Mrs. Ralph Bishop and Miss Peggy Babcock have also entertained for Mary Elizabeth.

Transportation Club To Meet

The regular luncheon meetings of the Transportation Corps Wives Club will be resumed Tuesday, September 16, at the Army War College Officers Club.

Fall fashions will be shown at the first meeting. Chairman of the committee sponsoring the the September luncheon, Mrs. Morton E. Townes, 3506 Cameron Mills rd., Alexandria, is also in charge of transportation arrangements for members and guests lacking transportation of their own.

Reservations must be made by September 12, through Mrs. W. D. Kelly, 4706 Nichols ave. sw. Other committee members are Mrs. Howard Quinn, 510 Four Mile rd., Alexandria; Mrs. Charles Newell, Arlington, Va., and Mrs. James M. Clow, 7142 Allentown rd. se.

Business Girl Fashions Lighten 'Budget Blues'

By Peggy Preston

THAT gal who rattles a typewriter all day long, keeps the files and smoothes the course of business, industry and government, has a mighty serious clothes problem on her hands this fall. Drastic style changes, plus low "white collar" wages combine to give her a bad case of budget blues.

But a fashion show last night at the Washington Hotel proved that her cause may not be a forgotten one, after all. Charm, the Magazine for the Business Girl, sponsored a display of fall styles that are new, bright and, most important, low priced. The figures on those price tags are bound to warm the cockles of the hearts of thousands of clerks and secretaries whose average wage per week is $37.50.

Clothes were supplied by a local speciality shop and models included members of Charm's Washington Advisory Board which is made up of local business girls. Miriam Gibson French, of Charm's staff, served as commentator for the show, describing the various costumes, all of which were selected and recommended by the magazines' fashion researchers.

Florence Foster, an employee at the British Embassy, models a dashing red wool winter coat and matching hat. The coat, made on princess lines, has a flared skirt and metal disks for buttons. Priced at under $50.00 this little coat is a business girl's dream come true

"THESE are clothes for the Girl of the Year," explained Miss French. "She is not a career woman, just a business girl who has a living to earn and is doing a darn good job of it. Her big purpose in life is to marry, have a home of her own and raise a family. Meanwhile, her livelihood depends upon her ability to look efficient, neat and pretty. It's a big order—a tough row to hoe and these clothes have been selected with an eye to helping her along the way."

Charm estimates that the average working girl spends 20 per cent of her salary on clothing. It is essential that she get the most possible out of the money she puts on her back, because there usually isn't any extra cash left over with which to buy replacements for bad buys.

Last night the several hundred spectators were in an age group from 18 to 27 years. The majority of them came from Government offices, others from private busines circles. They viewed suits, coats, dresses and hats that incorporated the new "terrifying" style changes, but the price range was moderate.

There were, for instance, suede pumps (with closed toes and heel) for $12.95 and $14.95; pretty, light weight wool frocks for under $25; good-looking tailored suits for as low as $29.95 and coats for $50.

The Washington Post

Ideal for the business girl is this low-priced suit of cocoa brown wool worsted, designed with double breasted coachman's jacket, accented with large hip pockets. It is modeled by Joyce Heck who could use just such an outfit for her clerical work in a downtown office. All the ensembles are available at an F street specialty shop

Good Goal

Each person has a special goal . . . That he would like to reach . . . And ordinarily there is . . . A good excuse for each . . . Perhaps to gather worldly wealth . . . Or gain immortal fame . . . Or just to live a quiet life . . . And have a worthy name . . . It may involve a rigid course . . . That promises success . . . Or it may be the pleasant road . . . To love and happiness . . . But part of every goal should be . . . The eagerness to serve . . . And gladly give all other hearts . . . The kindness they deserve . . . And every goal that is attained . . . Against whatever odds . . . Should be the kind that surely shows . . . The glory that is God's.

Jango Shop Has Party on 1st Birthday

The Jango Exchange, 1704 K st. nw., celebrated its first birthday yesterday with an all-day open house. Many prominent women of the service set, whose efforts are largely responsible for the success of the Junior Army-Navy Guild Organization, dropped in to offer congratulations.

All day a stream of Jangos and their friends visited the shop to browze around, sign the guest book and enjoy the refreshments served during the afternoon. Members wearing the pert red-white-and-blue Jango uniform acted as hostesses.

Mrs. Gilbert J. Rowcliff, who established the shop last fall, was guest of honor. She and Mrs. Herbert Watson, Exchange chairman, were presented with gardenia corsages.

Invited as special guests were Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift, Mrs. Carl Spaatz and Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

Among others present were Mrs. Karl Mundt, wife of the Representative from South Dakota; Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, Mrs. Raymond Wheeler, Mrs. Julius Furer, Mrs. Edmund Gregory and Mrs. Vance D. Chapline.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Watson, Mrs. John W. Bowman, Jango president, and Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth, jr., former president. Mrs. W. C. Beecher was in charge of anniversary arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Frank McCabe, Mrs. Byford Bain and Mrs. A. D. Simpson.

By day's end, two large boxes were well filled with birthday donations which will be tagged and offered for sale on the exchange shelves next week.

Catt—Wubbena

Miss Eileen Elizabeth Wubbena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wubbena of Bladensburg, Md., became the bride yesterday of R. Keith Catt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Catt of Kalkaska, Mich. The Rev. E. C. Stellhorn officiated at the ceremony, and a reception followed at the University of Michigan League.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown, fashioned with sweetheart neckline and long train. Her finger-tip veil of illusion fell from a Juliet cap, and she carried a Bible covered with a white orchid.

Miss Dawn Wubbena attended her sister as maid of honor, costumed in fuchia taffeta and carrying a bouquet of baby mums in fall colors. Miss Florence Wubbena, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Ione Bennett were bridesmaids. They wore sea green taffeta and carried bouquets of baby mums.

Glen Catt, the bridegroom's brother, was best man, and the ushers were Donald Bennett, Burton Hendricks, DeVere Ryckman and William Wubbena, jr., brother of the bride.

After a cruise to Buffalo, New York and then to northern Michigan, the couple will make their home at Ann Arbor, Mich., where Mr. Catt is a student at the university. The bridegroom served four years as an officer in the U. S. Navy.

Hurwitz—Silverman

Miss Miriam Silverman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Silverman, and Harlan Earle Hurwitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan W. Hurwitz of Worcester, Mass., were married August 31 at B'nai Israel Synagogue. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rabbi Henry Segal assisted by Cantor Simon Weiss and a reception and dinner dance followed at the synagogue.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was gowned in white crepe, her veil of illusion held by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a cascade of white orchids and lilies.

Miss Rosellin Dawson, in pale blue taffeta, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids, Misses Sybil Hurwitz, the bridegroom's sister, and Beverly Berol, both of Worcester, and Flora Jeanne Wilner and Frances Kaye, of this city, wore pink net. They carried cascades of purple asters.

Misses Nadyne Josepha Silverman and Ann Pearl Hurwitz, sisters of the bride and bridegroom, wearing blue taffeta and carrying pink and blue cascades of roses and asters, were flower girls.

Bernard Hurwitz, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Sherman Meiselman, Burton Siegel, Morton Israel and Alvin Fossner, all of Worcester, Mass.

The couple will live at 3850 39th st. nw., following a honeymoon in Miami Beach. Mrs. Hurwitz is with the District of Columbia's Auditor's Office and Mr. Hurwitz, who is a World War II veteran, is attending George Washington University.

Hancock—Fernandez

Miss Anita Fernandez, daughter of Representative Antonio M. Fernandez of Santa Fe, N. Mex., and Mrs. Fernandez, and Elmo Hancock, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Schaetz of Fort Pierce, Fla., were married August 23 in the sacristry of historic St. Francis Cathedral in Santa Fe.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Miss Dolores Fernandez, was maid of honor and David Ramirez was best man.

The bride wore white taffeta made bouffant style with a veil of illusion held by orange blossom clusters. She carried gardenias and white roses. Her sister wore canary yellow organdy with a matching hat and carried talisman roses.

A reception was held afterward.

The bridegroom was with the Fourteenth Air Force in China during the war. Now a student at Highland University, he and his bride will live at Las Vegas while he completes his studies.

Sorg—Click

At the Faith Lutheran Church in Arlington, Va., Miss Ruth Louise Click, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cicero Click of Salisbury, N. C., became the bride of Karl Gery Sorg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl August Sorg of Arlington, at 5 p. m., September 6. The Rev. Robert W. Long officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white satin trimmed in lace with a veil of illusion held by a tiara of orange blossoms. She carried an orchid with her prayer book. The bride's sister, Mrs. James F. Fesperman of Salisbury, served as matron of honor, wearing powder blue taffeta and carrying an old-fashioned nosegay of mixed flowers. Quinn M. Cardwell of Arlington was best man.

Mrs. Sorg was graduated from Catawba College in Salisbury. She has been with the War Department in Washington for the past four years. Mr. Sorg, a graduate of Dartmouth College, served during the war with both the infantry and with the Office of Strategic Service. He will begin law studies at Georgetown University this fall.

Lynch—Osbourn

Miss Helen Wyatt Osbourn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allan Osbourn, and James Lynch, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch of Takoma Park, Md., were married at 8 o'clock last Saturday evening at Emory Methodist Church. Dr. Edgar Berry officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore ivory satin trimmed in seed pearls and a veil of illusion attached to a cap of old lace and orange blossoms. She carried white roses and dwarf chrysanthemums.

Her attendants, all Delta Gamma sorority sisters, included Miss Isabel Knowles of Hanover, Pa., as maid of honor, gowned in pink taffeta, and Miss Betty Latimer and Miss Martha Barnaby, in lavender. They carried old-fashioned nosegays and wore garlands of flowers in their hair.

Paul Mattix, jr., was best man and the ushers were Richard Auldt and Ralph Livengood.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Charles M. Maddox, at Takoma Park. After a short wedding trip, the couple will live in Washington and Mr. Lynch will continue his studies at George Washington University, where he is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Schiller—Koren

Miss Elaine Merle Koren, daughter of Mrs. Mina J. Koren, became the bride of Irwin Max Schiller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milford Schiller, last Saturday. Rabbi M. H. Lewinson performed the ceremony at his home, 735 Allison st. nw.

The bride, who wore a beige suit with orchids, was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Lester Payourow. The bridegroom had Robert Haddicke, with whom he served in the Army in France and Belgium, as best man.

The couple is now honeymooning in Great Smoky Mountains and will live in Washington when they return. Mrs. Schiller is with the Office of Alien Propery and Mr. Schiller is attending University of Maryland where he is a member of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity.

Martins on Honeymoon in Poconos

Miss Harriet Estelle Olker, daughter of Mrs. Josephine A. Olker of Washington, became the bride Saturday afternoon of Eugene Anderson Martin, son of Mrs. Berthalee F. Martin of Downer, N. J. The Rev. F. E. Warren officiated at the ceremony which took place at 4:30 in St. Patrick's Episcopal Church.

Given in marriage by her uncle, B. H. Wittig of Portsmouth, Va., the bride wore a gown of ivory satin. Her long veil of ivory illusion was held by a tiara of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Robert Lockwood, matron of honor, wore gold satin and carried rust chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Holley Murray and Miss Shirley Wilson, were costumed in green satin and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Robert Martin, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Louis Brosius of Adamstown, Md., and John D. Wittig of Portsmouth, Va., cousin of the bride.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church rooms.

The bride is a graduate of Maryland University. The bridegroom attended Maryland University and this fall will attend the University of Pennsylvania.

After a wedding trip through the Poconos, the couple will live in Lansdowne, Pa.

Poole—Poole

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sinclair of Herndon, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Christine Poole, to Joseph R. Poole, son of Mrs. Joseph Poole and the late Mr. Poole of Herndon, August 29 at Herndon Methodist parsonage. The Rev. L. F. Callahan officiated.

The bride, wearing pale blue with white accessories, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Frank Kidwell, who wore a white suit. Frank Kidwell was best man.

The bride's parents entertained with a reception and the couple left afterwards for a wedding trip to Kentucky. They will live in Herndon.

Breaking Under Strain of Giving Home Care To Mentally Stricken Paralyzed Veteran, Wife Asks His Folks for Help; They Sniff

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is 28 and I am 26. We have been married eight years. Until recently we were both happy, well adjusted and loved each other dearly.

Two years ago, while in the service, my husband suffered a stroke and is now paralyzed. There was brain damage due to the stroke. A year ago I brought him home from the Veterans' Hospital, as he seemed so unhappy there.

Needless to say, he isn't the same man anymore. He is becoming childish, throws food aside and refuses to do the simplest service for himself, even when he could. It has been months since I've had any respite. I do all the housework, also the outside work, without help; and in addition must bathe, dress, shave and feed my husband.

Call Her Selfish For Asking Relief

I AM always tired and lately feel continually depressed. Thinking that maybe I need rest, I proposed to my husband's family that (1) either they accept his care for a week, or (2) I take him back for a while to the Veterans' Hospital, which he is free to enter at any time.

They made me feel that my attitude was wrong; that I was being selfish even to think of it. My husband does get upset if ever I try to leave, even for a few hours, but he gets over it very quickly.

All the leading doctors who have studied his condition say he will never be any better and somehow it doesn't seem selfish to me to want to get away for a while—just as any nurse needs relief from duty to restore her energy. I feel I need that kind of rest. Am I right or wrong? E. G.

Wife Urgently Needs a Recess

DEAR E. G.: In bringing your mentally stricken paralyzed husband home from a veterans' hospital in the hope of making him a little happier, when his condition had been pronounced incurable, you established incontrovertible proof that your heart is right.

At present, you urgently need rest from the terrific load you most unselfishly brought on yourself: the load of incessant drudgery in his service, plus the nervous stress of solitary confinement, more or less, with an irrational patient.

Your continued depression and chronic dragging exhaustion nowadays are warning signals that your strength is almost spent. You are heading for a breakdown yourself in the not too distant future, unless you are given that temporary relief your good sense calls for.

Time to Ignore In-Laws Views

CERTAINLY you are entitled to a nurse's holiday, and at this point it ought to be a two weeks' rest period at least. After which you should have guarantee of such relief at regular intervals—say a week every six months or two weeks annually at a minimum—if you are to continue providing home care for your husband.

If his family won't accept his care for so much as a week to give you a breather, they've got no business sniffing at your alternative thought of sending him back to the Veterans Hospital as a self-help measure.

Hence I think you should tackle the emergency without further reference to their opinion, since their would-be contribution consists merely of abominably selfish back seat driving. Turn to your family physician and the hospital authorities for practical advice on how to safeguard your health at least penalty to your husband—and thus reasonably perpetuate your capacity to minister to him. M. H.

TOMORROW—What would you do about an unaffectionate husband, one who makes unflattering remarks about you before your friends? Mary Haworth considers the problem in her column tomorrow.

Before and After

An unknown sage is said to have claimed "a pessimist scrubs the bath tub when he gets in, an optimist scrubs the tub when he gets out, but a real lady or gentleman scrubs it both times." It is well to be in this last class in tub washing as it not only insures you a clean tub but the next fellow as well.

By Bill Klemm—The Washington Post

WHILE their husbands pondered economic problems, wives of delegates to the International Statistical Conferences yesterday were introduced to American miracles for easy homemaking in a demonstration of electrical appliances in Pepco's Electric Institute.

Cake batter was whipped up in a jiffy with an electric mixer and, while it baked, a thick, juicy steak was "charcoal-broiled." The visitors watched in delighted amazement as a batch of laundry was tossed into a washing machine and dried as they waited. Many of the women are from countries where some of these "everyday" gadgets still have not penetrated or are too rare for the average home.

High popularity equipment, especially with mothers of large families, included the dishwashing machine ("Husbands in our country do not help with the dishes," one visitor explained) and the ironer, at which the demonstrator sat at ease while she ironed a man's shirt.

Later tea was served and the visitors marveled again at the little, chocolate-iced Wellesley cakes they had seen taken from the home freezer some time earlier.

Ask Anne Your Questions on Homemaking

I have an old wardrobe trunk that I would like to recondition. After using rust remover on the metal parts, what shall I use for a finish? How can I clean the outside? What sort of paint should I use on it? The inside has dirty material that I want to remove and replace. How? What shall I use to paste the new material on? M. L. B.

Use either lacquer or metal paint on the metal parts. The outside can be cleaned by sponging with a cloth wrung out in lukewarm soapy water, then rinsing with a cloth wrung out in clear water. The paint you use on the ouside depends on the material of the trunk. If it's a fabric, canvas paint might be suitable; if metal, a gloss or semi-gloss enamel; if leather, a combination leather dye and polish. As to the lining, you may have to use damp cloths in soaking it off. A clear plastic cement should be suitable for gluing in a new lining of fabric or wallpaper.

I am anxious to have a birthday party for my son who will be a year old in November. Have you any suggestions as to how to entertain a group of children from 1 to 3 years of age? What sort of refreshments would be suitable? G. F.

The simpler the birthday party for youngsters of this age the better. They're a bit young for cooperative play. It would be a good idea to ask their mothers to bring them in their everyday clothes, then have a sand box or similar playing facilities ready for them. As each child arrives, you might give him a toy to play with at the party and take home later. It's better not to invite too many children—five or six should be the limit—as a large group may confuse and upset them. The best time for the party would be late in the afternoon. Then refreshments can serve as supper, and the children can go right to bed when they get home if they are tired and excited. You might have simple sandwiches, milk or fruit juice, ice cream cones or cake. The cake shouldn't be a rich one. Sponge or sunshine cake with a thin icing and a candle in the middle would be appropriate. Don't persuade them to eat too much. A lot of food and the excitement of the party could easily lead to stomachaches.

My griddle—a stainless steel and copper utensil of excellent make—has started sticking. We only use soap and steel wool for cleaning it. Can you give me some advice on the subject? M. H. J.

The manufacturer of this griddle says that only soap and water and a mild household cleanser (preferably the one made for this purpose by the company) should be used in cleaning it. The use of steel wool probably explains its sticking. The special cleanser should be available at the store where you bought the griddle. Perhaps you can rehabilitate it with this preparation.

"Take my advice, and don't ever go walking with Alexander . . . all he wants to do is walk!"

Little Autocrat of Table May Need Change in His Diet

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A lack of appetite has many causes. One very common one is when the baby gets so much milk that its appetite for other foods is stifled.

Sometimes, too, children dislike one vegetable or one cereal, and so spurn them repeatedly. There are so many varieties of vegetables, cereals and fruits, that it is foolish to insist upon a child accepting a disliked one.

Mrs. H. writes, "My little boy is 11 months old and healthy, but we do have a problem at mealtimes. Every meal is a dreaded ordeal instead of a pleasant, happy experience. He simply clamps his mouth shut and refuses to eat. He keeps pushing the spoon away, spilling everything all over himself and me, too.

"My husband tries to whistle, shake a rattle and generally stand on his head in order to coax him to eat. But I know this is the wrong method and will only make things worse.

Nerves Are Strained

"I try to give him a variety of cereals and vegetables but it is always the same thing. People tell me they would not bother to feed him when he acts this way, but surely there must be a better way than that. Won't you please tell us how to solve this problem? His behavior is affecting my nerves."

What I need to know to be intelligent about a solution is what the baby is being fed now. Surely something, if not the solid foods. And that something is presumably milk and lots of it.

Babies of this age may have three cups of milk a day, one with each meal. They should have no night feedings at all. Then if the milk is not too rich in cream, there will be plenty of appetite for the other necessary foods.

Reduce Milk

So whatever you are doing, reduce the milk to three cups a day to drink. One extra can be used in the preparation or serving of other foods. For the time, skim any cream from the milk, as this will reduce its nutritive value and will arouse a better appetite in the baby. Be sure he gets lots of water to drink, three ounces of orange juice daily, and his quota of vitamin D.

I feel sure with no more milk than this he will be eager for his meals and will not need to be entertained in order to eat them. That, as you surmised, gives the child an entirely faulty idea of why he should eat.

After Childbirth

Mothers Told Not to Linger In Hospital

By Paul Dix

St. Louis, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Women who insist on staying in bed after childbirth may just be looking for sympathy!

Don't quote me, lady! I'm just reporting what Dr. William F. Mengert, Dallas, Tex., an official of the third American Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology, said today.

"Rest," said the doctor, "doesn't mean you have to be lying flat on your back."

Mengert, chief of obstetrics at Southwestern Medical Foundation, said he, personally, gets his patients on their feet as soon as the effects of anesthesia has worn off.

"Women," said Mengert, "haven't changed a bit in the past few thousands of years. Maybe they don't lead rough lives of their ancestors, but they're really just as tough and can absorb as much punishment."

Mengert said he doesn't advocate a return to full activity immediately after childbirth. Usually, he said, his patients stay in the hospital about a week—sort of a vacation for them.

He blamed the theory that women needed long periods of rest in bed after having a baby on the medical revolution that followed the introduction of forceps into obstetrics.

"When the male replaced the midwife as birth attendant, childbirth became an elaborate ceremony and physicians began to regard the healthy woman who had just given birth as sick."

Mengert said some modern physicians, too, can be blamed for continuation of the practice of making mothers feel they're ill and need lots of attention.

He said one obstetrician visiting his hospital was amazed at the way Mengert's patients got back into stride after childbirth. As he left, Mengert said, he asked the visiting physician if he intended following the same practice in his own hospital.

"What?" he said the visitor replied. "And have them think I'm neglecting them!"

All pain in childbirth isn't psychological, he explained. "It just plain hurts, but there is no shock. And by emotion and fear it's magnified."

Mengert said he became convinced that women didn't need to stay in bed after labor when he was an interne in charge of a ward of Negro patients.

"A day or so after they had their babies," he said, "they were sneaking out of bed to do the family wash."

4 Marlboro School Bids Held Too High

Four bids ranging from $1,057,920 to $1,184,000 for construction of the projected Frederick Sasscer High School at Upper Marlboro, Md., are too high, the Prince Georges County School Board decided yesterday.

The board postponed action on accepting or rejecting the bids until a special meeting at 8 p. m. September 23 at the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md.

Comparable construction at the Oxon Hill High School drew a bid of $900,000, according to G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools, and the Marlboro project has features that should make the cost of construction lower. It is on level ground, has less cubic feet, and water and sewer services are aavilable at the school without long piping from other locations.

The board had expected some increase in the cost of construction and had written to the county commissioners asking that body to place in writing a commitment that the commissioners would issue bonds that are being held until after the first of the year in order that the increased costs could be met. The Marlboro contract is a part of the two-million-dollar bond issue already sold for school construction, but an abnormal increase in costs of construction would make it necessary to dig into the fund intended for next year's building program.

The school board will not award a contract on the Marlboro High School until it has received the assurance of the commissioners that the bond money can be counted upon, it was indicated.

The board named 46 new teachers yesterday, bringing the county teaching staff to 759.

Bank President Asks New Trial

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Clarence L. Robey, president of the Purcellville National Bank, has filed a motion in Federal District Court here asking a new trial on a charge of aiding in misapplication of funds of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, Fredericksburg.

Robey, convicted with eight other persons on the charge after a lengthy trial last spring, is the fourth defendant to seek a new trial on the ground that an attempt was made to influence a juror. He also has filed with the Fourth United State Circuit Court of Appeals a motion asking it to remand the appeals case to the District Court.

Martinsburg Buses Give Free Rides

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 9—Marking its first anniversary as an intracity facility, the Emery Motor Coach Lines yesterday invited everyone to ride for three hours free. The management estimated that 1500 accepted the invitation.

R. L. Emery, President, said at a meeting marking the anniversary that more than 570,000 persons had ridden the intracity lines during the year and that only two minor accidents had occurred, with property damage of $23.

Crop Outlook Declines in Va.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Crop conditions declined generally in Virginia during the week ended Saturday, the Virginia cooperative crop reporting service said today in its weekly summary of the State's agricultural outlook.

Serious damage was caused to late corn and soybeans by prolonged hot weather and these crops were described by the service as being in "very poor" condition. Also damaged by the heat were lespedeza hay in most tidewater counties and fire-cured and sun-cured tobacco. Pastures in the state generally were reported in poor condition, the service said.

M'Kellar at Shore Before Collapse

SEN. KENNETH McKELLAR (D., Tenn.), was reported in "satisfactory" condition yesterday at Bethesda Naval Hospital, following an emergency flight to Washington from Atlantic City, N. J. The dean of the Senate and long one of its most powerful members was stricken with an acute gastric upset at the ocean resort, where he saw Miss Tennessee win the Miss America title. This picture of the Senator on the boardwalk was made shortly before he became ill Sunday night

Morse Urges World-Wide Job Service

World-wide adpotion of an international employment system, as recommended by the International Labor Conference, was urged yesterday by Undersecretary of Labor David A. Morse.

Speaking before the Educational Institute on Economic Security at American University, he emphasized that concerted international action toward maximum employment is required by today's interdependence of national economies.

Morce contrasted the present full employment in this country with the "temporary employment security" in countries such as France and England, where there is a shortage of manpower, and with the serious unemployment problem in countries such as China and Italy.

Other speakers at yesterday's session included R. D. Fletcher, chief of placement standards, United States Employment Service; Ray R. Adams, director, readjustment allowance service, Veterans' Administration, and Donald H. Dabelstein, acting chief, program division, Office of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Fletcher declared that an employment security program should become a vital factor in every community, serving as a clearing house for employers and employes. Adams spoke on tiding the veteran over his readjustment period. Dabelstein outlined the work of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Big Butch Puts His Owner In Doghouse on Point of Law

Big Butch's ancestry is a bit on the shady side. He's got some chow blood and there's a trace of German police dog.

But he came in for more attention than a blue-blood yesterday in the courtroom of Municipal Judge Armond Scott.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John B. Diamond III entered the picture briefly. So did Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King. And so did Health Department Inspector Ethel Glassman.

Big Butch wasn't being tried, but his owner, Thomas Alexander, 42, of 1146 5th st. ne., was. It seems that Alexander was arrested last week by Pvt. O. L. Efert of the Ninth Precinct because Big Butch has no license. It seems, too, that Alexander had neglected to have Big Butch vaccinated as required by law.

Judge Scott wanted to know where Big Butch had come from.

"Why he just started hanging around my place," explained Alexander. "I gave him a little something to eat and a little water. He just adopted me."

Next the judge wanted to know why Big Butch didn't have a tag with a name on it attached to his collar.

"My name, or his?" asked Alexander in puzzlement.

"Why yours, of course," said Judge Scott.

Assistant United States Attorney Diamond who happened to be in court on another matter overheard this snatch of conversation.

"The dog's name doesn't have to have the name of the owner on it," said Diamond authoritatively. "I've got a dog. There's no name on his tag."

"What's the law on that?" said Judge Scott to nobody in particular.

Leaning over to his clerk, Alfred Scott, no relation, he said:

"Send for an assistant corporation counsel. Let's find out what the law says about this."

Assistant Corporation Counsel King arrived on the scene and he nad Scott (the clerk) went thumbing through a bulky law book.

entered by Health Department Inspector Ethel Glassman. She too was in the courtroom on other business.

But Miss Glassman and Assistant United States Attorney Diamond called it quits when Assistant Corporation Counsel King finally came up with the law.

"It says here," read off Scott (the clerk), "that dog collars must bear 'engraved in deep and durable letter the name of the owner and the letters D. C.'"

"Five-dollar fine," said Judge Scott.

Alexander paid the fine and went home to join Big Butch in the doghouse.

Montgomery License for Abattoir Hit

Opposition to a proposed Montgomery County ordinance licensing and regulating slaughterhouses was encountered yesterday at a meeting of the County Commissioners.

Farmers and farm groups criticized the ordinance which, if adopted, would provide for a $500 license fee. The ordinance had been requested by a small group of Gaithersburg, Md., residents, who object to a slaughterhouse which is being erected near their homes.

The Commissioners heard both sides and took the matter under advisement.

Supporting the ordinance was a delegation led by Clitus O. Bourdeaux, of Gaithersburg, who said the abattoir was being built within 367 yards of his home.

Speaking against were O. W. Anderson, county agricultural agent, and James King, president of the Farm Bureau.

Warning the ordinance would "virtually prevent operation of a much-needed slaughterhouse," Anderson said a "proper" abattoir would eliminate present insanitary slaughtering methods whereby farmers hang slaughtered animals from trees or in their woodsheds."

Local and State health officials, queried yesterday, said the present method is "legal and beyond our jurisdiction." Anderson described the condition as "a health menace."

Va. Food Dealers Hear Talks on Sales Tax Need

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Four members of a discussion panel at the annual convention of the Virginia Independent Food Dealers Association agreed generally today the Old Dominion needs a sales tax, provided other means of increasing State revenue by some $15,000,000 are found to be not feasible.

Participating in the discussion were State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett, Richmond attorney Walter M. Evans, Norfolk attorney Charles L. Kaufman and Dr. Charles F. Marsh, professor of economics at the College of William and Mary. Charles B. McFee, managing director of the Virginia Retail Merchants Association, served as moderator.

The panel members reached the conclusion that 12 to 15 million dollars in additional revenue is necessary to provide adequate education and health services. This could best be obtained, they agreed, by levying a retail sales tax if public support was not forthcoming for increases in other taxes, by improved methods of assessment and admiinstration, and by a cigaret sales tax.

4 Baltimore Brewers Lift Beer Prices

Local beer may be going up in something besides suds it looks like.

Four out of five Baltimore breweries yesterday announced an increase of $1 a barrell, and eight cents a case, in beer prices, and the Chrisitian Heurich Co. in Washington, according to one report, announced it also might raise the suds price.

Christian Heurich officials were unavailable yesterday, they having left en masse to attend a Heurichs' Brewers team finalist ball game in Harrisburg, Pa. Local distributors of other brands of beer were uncommunicative on whether the Baltimore 'breweries' prices increase presaged a general boosting in price.

The Baltimore breweries said their increased costs in material and labor were principal factors in the price increases.

The increases announced by the Baltimore breweries averages out to less than one-fourth of a cent a glass, allowing for spillage, etc. Baltimore tavern keepers so far have not presented a united front on whether to absort or pass on the price boost.

Annapolis Ready For Water Work

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Mayor William U. McCready said the city was ready to go ahead today with plans for water system improvements after the State had approved plans for financing the project.

The Mayor said a $230,000 bond issue would be advertised September 26 an dhe would proceed with a contract for work expected to cost about $260,000. A wide range of improvements, including new equipment, is contemplated. Water rents will be raised 10 per cent for city residents and 30 per cent for suburban users on October 1, he announced.

Red Magazine Hits K. C.

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Russian magazine New Times lashed out today at the American Knights of Columbus, saying the organization "propagates full Fascist ideas and race hatred under the guise of perfecting American way of life and American democracy."

Louis A. Potter Named to Conduct Choral Society

Louis A. Potter, Washington musical director, has been selected to conduct the Washington Choral Society for the 1947-48 season.

Potter

Warren A. Grimes, president of the society, said the first of three oratorios under Potter's direction will be Mendelssohn's "Elijah," in Constitution Hall on Tuesday, November 4. Rehearsals for "Elijah" will be held tonight at Central High School. Auditions will be between 7:30 and 8 o'clock.

There are 200 singers for the "Elijah" presentation. Potter's work with the Washington Choral Society has won him Nation-wide recognition.

Bonnet Seeking Urgent Parley With Marshall

By the United Press

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, returning from a conference with his government in Paris, said last night that he has "matters of great urgency" to discuss with Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

He vigorously denied published reports, however, that he would ask for an emergency United States loan to France.

Bonnet said France needs "massive imports" of wheat to deal with a grave bread problem.

"The bread ration is down to 200 grams when the French worker normally eats 750 grams. Germans now seem to enjoy a bread ration of up to 350 grams a day, and it's no wonder French workers become bitter. It's not possible to expect them to work well when they don't have enough to eat."

Lone Thug Sought In Holdup of Gas Station and Store

The owner of a hardware store was robbed at gunpoint of $45 yesterday afternoon by a thug believed to have been the man who earlier held up a gas station for about $54.

Max Levine of 513 Nicholson st. nw., told police a young man flashing a gun held him up at his hardware store, 1702 7th st. nw., with the threat: "Make it snappy or I'll shot you."

He escaped with between $45 and $50 and an electric iron, valued at $4.50, after forcing Levine to the rear of the store.

Harold L. Wright, 22, of 1000 P st. nw., told police he was robbed at 2:55 a. m. at his service station, 1100 Rhode Island ave. nw., by a pistol-packing thug who fled with $53.91 and Wright's gold wedded band, worth $5.

The bandit was described by both victims as wearing a brown felt hat, dark trousers and light colored shirt. They said he was of medium height and weighed about 145 pounds.

U. N. Military Men In Java This Week For Truce Inquiry

Batavia, Java, Sept. 8 (AP).—U. S. Consul General Walter A. Foote, chairman of the United Nations consular mission. Said today the mission's military staff would begin arriving this weekend to supervise and report on enforcement of the U. N. cease-fire order in the Dutch-Indonesian conflict.

His announcement came as an Indonesian news agency dispatch from Jogjakarta said Dutch soldiers had turned two north central Javanese villages into an "ocean of flames," allegedly killing 96 civilians with machine guns when the population of one of the burning towns attempted to escape.

(In Washington Hubertus J. Van Mook, governor general of the Dutch East Indies, conferred with Secretary of State Marshall yesterday. He said no solution to the conflict was mentioned "other than that decreed by the United Nations which is now being tested.")

GI Bonds Cashed For 37 Millions

Banks in the Richmond Federal Reserve District, which includes Washington, reported $37,143,472.59 worth of payments of Armed Forces Leave bonds for the period from September 2 through September 6.

The reports do not measure the full extent of the cashing in, since banks are allowed 30 days to turn in to the Federal Reserve System the bonds they cash.

Banks in the country as a whole reported cashing $243,633,650 in GI terminal leave pay bonds during the first three days after the bonds became eligible for cashing on September 2.

Sen. Thomas Fears Riots In England

By International News Service

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), who returned from Europe yesterday, predicted riots in England and France this fall unless the two countries can import food. He said:

"If we don't supply them, they won't have the food. France is a little better off than England. From what I saw, I feel we should have a special session of Congress to deal with the matter."

Thomas and Senator Young (R., N. Dak.), who also returned from Europe yesterday, attended the meeting of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in Geneva.

Young said that what surprised him was "how little the people in Europe work." He reported that workers in France have a three-day weekend and that throughout Europe a 2-hour lunch period is common.

Mrs. Benson Solves Mystery of Spanish Calls

It was baffling at first. The phone would ring and Esta R. Benson (wife of lawyer Morris) would answer—only to find that the caller addressed her in Spanish.

Curious about these strange calls, Mrs. Benson began sleuthing, and eventually cracked the mystery.

Her telephone number is Taylor 5500. The number at the Paraguayan Embassy is Taylor 5000, and its address is 5500 16th st. nw.

Mrs. Benson put two and two together, and went to a Spanish-speaking friend for help. Now when a Spanish voice greets her, she glibly replies:

"Lo siento, senor. Esta es la casa de Benson. El numero del Embasse Paraguayan es cinco cero cero cero.

A 7-pound newcomer named Joanne moved into the Batjer household at 4615 Arkansas ave. nw. the other day.

Joanne's arrival recalls the story of how the Batjers happened to become Mr. and Mrs.

Ann was singing in a USO concert unit; Lieut. Col Joe was bossing a group of P-38s on New Guinea. When the USO unit got to New Guinea in October of '44, it seems that . . .

Aw—you know how these things go.

EXPLANATION

The sharpest ventriloquist to hit town in a long while is the Capitol's Bob Evans, but I'm disappointed to find that local audiences aren't getting his full routine.

After his act was over, I whispered to an 11-year-old relative of mine:

"The last time I saw this guy, back in Kentucky, he drank a glass of water while the dummy sang that song. Wonder why he didn't drink any water tonight?"

Whereupon my pride & joy whispered back:

"Maybe he ain't thirsty tonight."

LONG AND SHORT OF IT

W. C. Fahey of 3408 Macomb st. nw. enters the argument over long vs. short skirts with this thought:

There are shapes which are amusing,
There are shapes which make you screech;
These are shapes a bit confusing
At points which diet failed to reach.

MR. FIXIT

Some time ago we ran an item about a crowd watching a prize fight on a television set exhibited by a store at 14th and Euclid nw.

In the middle of the fight the store's closing time rolled around, so a clerk switched off the set and locked up—just as the scrap was getting good.

After that item appeared here, Milton Rossler (the proprietor of the store) investigated the situation.

Now patrons are invited to sit on feather-down chairs and sofas, and watch the show until it's finished.

Golly, the things this paper does for its readers!

THE BEST

Here's a good word for the police, to offset some of the knocks. Paul H. Shaw writes:

"I drive a bulldog Mack gasoline truck for the Independent Oil Co. of Rosslyn, Va. My truck broke down at 34th and M sts. nw. the other night, and I thought I was going to get a ticket for blocking traffic.

"Instead, the policeman acted like a real pal. He helped me fix the trouble, and meantime skillfully directed traffic around the truck.

"He wore badge No. 10, and for my money he's the best."

He certainly is, Paul. Badge No. 10 is worn by Private B. W. Best of 1726 B st. se.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four adorable red kittens, six weeks old." (GEorgia 7131).

CATTY ITEM

Every time I tell a story, somebody tops it.

The other day we had the story of the intelligent cat that "played the piano" to indicate that he wanted somebody to let him out of the house.

Now Minnie L. Goodwin, of 805 C st. sw., tells me that there's a cat at her place who employs a different system.

If there's somebody in the kitchen, the feline conveys her meaning in the usual manner. If there isn't, she summons the household by pulling a knob which rings a specially rigged bell.

Does anybody have a cat that could take over a radio program for a few nights while I go to the movies?

Grin and Bear It

"Our club is meeting to protest against long skirts, Ambrose, and I don't intend to be the only woman there wearing the old-fashioned short skirt!"

Leonard Lyons on Broadway

Dr. Einstein Makes a Concession

NEW YORK.—Last week Ingrid Bergman, Charles Boyer, Louis Calhern, together with the director, producers, technicians, etc., went to Las Vegas to shoot the final scenes of "Arch of Triumph." The insurance company insisted that they travel by separate vehicles. Miss Bergman went by train, Boyer by car and Calhern by plane. . . . At night some members of the cast went to the Flamingo's gambling room, where they watched the fabulous Nick the Greek gambling. Nick was on a 30-hour stretch, during which he had only coffee and orange juice. He was a "wrong-bettor" that night, betting with the House and against the Player. When it was Nick's turn to shoot the dice, he bet against his roll—and made nine successive passes.

Ladislas Farago, now of the United Nations World, tells of the prewar days when he covered Germany, and was assigned to cover the story of Prof. Albert Einstein's violin concert for the benefit of a Berlin synagogue. The recital was to be given in the house of worship . . . Farago attended the rehearsal, introduced himself to Einstein and asked if he would pose for a picture. Einstein resented this interruption and said: "Go to the devil." . . . "Where," replied Farago, "can I find a devil, in this holy place?" . . . Einstein conceded: "Take the picture."

A visitor at Einstein's home in Princeton last week noticed a collection of pipes. Einstein toyed with one of them, which was empty. "I have some fine tobacco with me," said the visitor . . . "No, thank you," said Einstein. "My doctor has forbidden me to smoke. Personally, I don't think it would affect me. But my doctor is a sensitive man—and I don't want to hurt him."

Mary MacArthur has been touring with Lillian Gish this past summer, playing one of the leading roles in "The Marquise." She told her parents, Charles MacArthur and Helen Hayes, that for her the climax of the tour would come at George Abbott's summer playhouse when Mr. Abbott himself would see her performance. This, the youngster assured her parents, was the dream of all young actresses . . . Then came the disappointing word that Abbott would have his wife play the role opposite Lillian Gish, during the run at his theater, and Mary MacArthur would play a maid's role . . . Miss Hayes, Mr. MacArthur and their many friends decided to take some action. "No. I'll play the maid's role and give it my best," Mary MacArthur told them. "After all, I may learn something by watching—I might even learn what not to do."

A famed Southern Senator always joins the liberal bloc in his voting—but only in the first four years of his term. In the final two years of his term he seems to lose his independence and votes to please the political leaders in his home State. "To be perfectly frank about it," he confided, in describing his six-year term of office, "for the first four years I'm a United States Senator, and for the last two years I'm a candidate for re-election."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

THERE'S YOUR PUBLIC ENEMY, PAT... AND THE PUBLIC FINALLY GOT A BREAK.

WAHOO AND STEVE ROPER

GO ON, TAKE A GOOD LOOK---FOR FREE--AT THE KISSER MILLIONS ONCE PAID TO STARE AT!
WELL, WELL!--FACE TO FACE WITH JEZEBEL JONES!--IF I WERE 20 YEARS YOUNGER AND HAD A BAG OF POPCORN IN MY LAP, IT WOULD SEEM MORE NATURAL!
DON'T SHORT CHANGE ME, KID!--IT WAS ONLY 16 YEARS AGO THAT I RETIRED FROM PICTURES--!
LET'S SKIP THE VITAL STATISTICS, MISS JONES!... WHERE'S PRINCESS MINNIE-HA-CHA? --I'M TAKING HER OFF THIS PIRATE SCOW TONIGHT!
(SIGH!)--YOU HANDSOME HOTHEAD! WHAT A PITY I MUST FEED YOU TO THE SHARKS!
YOU AND HOW MANY HIRED HOODLUMS, MISS JONES?
HOW MANY? ENOUGH, HANDSOME!---LOOK BEHIND YOU!
SAUNDERS + WAGGON

DIXIE DUGAN

THINKING EVERYTHING OVER SENSIBLY, PA, THERE'S NO EARTHLY REASON WHY KEN BRADFORD COULDN'T CALL ON OUR DIXIE EVEN IF HE IS GETTING MARRIED NEXT WEEK—
YEAH — THEY CAN STILL BE FRIENDS—
I WON'T SLEEP UNTIL I APOLOGIZE FOR ALMOST SHOOTING HIM
